TO DANCE AT CHARITY BALL

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Talks of Many Things-The Charity Ball Tonight—Supper Club to Feature Dinner at 8 o'Clock

The stores are just as busy as can be. Money must certainly be flowing freely in spite of the H. C. of L. I caught a glinpse of Mrs. Sydney Hutchinson shopping the other day, looking very well in a fur topecast. Her freek was of dark garnet striped crepe de cline and she wore a rather large hat of the same color. An exquisite face collar was about the neck of the gown. Her coat was open and half thrown back, and so I saw most of the gown. It was very becoming. I thought.

THEAR that a number of men on the committee of the Supper Club have decided to give dinners at the meeting on Saturday of this week, and to make dinner the feature of the club. The fact that the music had to stop at 12 o'clock was a disappointment to many who had not realized that they ought to get there early enough if they wanted to dannee long. Of course, the members of the club can stay in the ballroom and have supper later. It is only the dancing that must stop at 12. That's a law, you know. But the music begins at 8 o clock, and so it's possible to go to dinner and dance from 8 to 12. And, my goodness! that is enough, isn't it' I hear that the management of the hotel has arranged with the committee to serve a table d'hote dinner for a very reasonable amount, and that, with the really splendid music, will make the dinner idea even more interesting than the supper.

It is certainly one of the nicest affairs of the kind given, I think. Really, last of the kind given, I think. Really, last Tonight we will see "Alice and the Hatter" dancing arm in arm and "Robin Hood and Maid Marian." "Rob Roy and F'orn MacDonald." "Gabriel and Evangeline"—in fact, all the book characters you have known and loyed for many n year.

And the chorus and solo dancing will be fine, you know, because such dancers ment to M. of Sergeant and Theo Lillie and Brice B ynn and Uytendale Caner and I don't know how many others who dance like a streak will all be in line. There are more than 200 altogether.

VOU see, she is only two and a half, That see, she is only two and a hair, but then she has lovely little golden curls on her wee head, and so she was "orfiy" surprised when she saw Baby Brother and found that he was perfectly bald. She asked about it and mother explained that some new babies did not have hair. "But Grandon has not have any hair either," objected Betty. "That's because he's very old." explained mamma.

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Noyes Boyd, debutante daughter of Mrs. George W. Boyd. 125 South Twenty-second street, to Mr. Paul De Hoff Reed, son of Mrs. John F. the really splendid music, will make the dinner idea even more interesting than the supper.

It is certainly one of the nicest affairs of the kind given, I think. Really, last Saturday night, it seemed like a tiny bit of Paris in this quiet little old town, didn't it? And you know what kind of a fierce night that was. Saturday!

didn't it? And you know what kind of a fierce might that was. Saturday!

And tonight we have the Charity Ball, and, believe me, it's going to be preity fine: Have you heard about the tableaux? My dears, Brownic Warburton is going to pose as a peacock and Rosamond Lameaster will be Beauty in one of the tableaux. I have heard a lot about the pages of the book being turned and the characters stepping out to dance, and they are to, of course, but there will be also these beautiful tableaux between the dances.

I certainly intend to get there early, don't you? For if you are not early you won't get a seat, and the opening pageant is apt to be on time.

There is no question about it, the Charity Ball is a fashionable affair these days and every one goes. I just love to see the old Academy floored over and lighted up. It refrinds one of the days when the Assemblies were held there. Only the dancing then was in the foyer and the supper, with the famous terrapin was served on the stage and floored over seats.

Toright we will see "Alice and the Hatter" dancing arm in arm and trained and the remembered as Miss Catharine Dempsey. A series of dances is being planned for the new year.
