

$100,000 TO BUTCHER AS CHRISTMAS GIFT

Homer Wolf, Flaherty Heir and Beneficiary, Receives Word of Good Fortune

WILL KEEP ON WORKING

A substantial Christmas gift came to Homer Wolf, a butcher of Fifty-fifth and Spruce streets, and eleven other relatives of James P. Flaherty, an Atlantic City butchery, who died leaving an estate worth $960,000.

Mr. Flaherty was a former police lieutenant of this city and entered the hotel business in Atlantic City, where he was the police department. He died February 16, 1919. His direct relatives were named as beneficiaries by Mr. Flaherty, and although the will was contested by a sister of the testator's second wife, Mr. Flaherty's relatives won. A ruling in their favor was given yesterday by Judge Robert H. Ingersoll, of the Atlantic City Probate Court.

Will Stick to Meat Business

"I received word of the bequest by wire this morning," said Mr. Wolf, a nephew of the testator, "and it looks as though the share of each beneficiary would be near $100,000. I am going to remain right in the meat business and am not making any changes on account of the bequest. It comes as a good Christmas present."

Wolf's wife, Mrs. Bessie Wolf, was also named as one of the beneficiaries. W. M. Cashin, 5205 Catharine street, another nephew of Flaherty, also was named among the beneficiaries, said today he had not received official word of any bequest. "It will come as a good Christmas gift when I get it," he said, "but I had better not say anything about it until I am sure."

Revoked Old Will

Some years ago the testator made a will in favor of his second wife, cutting off his direct relatives with nominal bequests. Two years ago Mr. Flaherty died. Subsequently Mr. Flaherty signed a revocation of the instrument by which he had bequeathed the bulk of his estate to the second Mrs. Flaherty, and expressed a desire that his wealth be apportioned among his direct relatives in accordance with the inheritance laws of New Jersey.

Last June Miss Catherine H. Merry, a sister of Mrs. Flaherty, discovered the original will and halted measures for the distribution among relatives. In the contest that succeeded the document became known as the "lost" Flaherty will.

Wife's Kin Overruled

Judge Ingersoll overruled the contention of the relatives of Mrs. Flaherty that the testator was mentally unsound when he executed the revocation.

In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Wolf and Mr. Cashin, other relatives who will share in the estate are:

Mary O. Wheeler, sister, 23 South New York avenue, Atlantic City.

Mary O. Wheeler, daughter of Cecelia Gallagher, deceased, sister, 3625 North Fifteenth street, Philadelphia.

Bert W. Wheeler, husband of Mary O. Wheeler, 3625 North Fifteenth street, Philadelphia.

Kate Gallagher, daughter of Cecelia Gallagher, 3625 North Fifteenth street, Philadelphia.

Della Burroughs, daughter of Mary King, sister of deceased 55 Saunders avenue, Philadelphia.

James Burroughs, husband, same address, Philadelphia.

Frederick King, son of Mary King, 1821 Mt. Vernon street, Philadelphia.

Charles Raymond Wells, son of Lillian Wells, deceased daughter of Lillian Wells, 1821 Mt. Vernon street, Philadelphia.

Paul Heath Wells, Florence Wells, Lucy Wells, 1821 Mt. Vernon street, Philadelphia.

Whether there will be an appeal from Judge Ingersoll's decision is not known.

TO VIEW THEIR OWN MOVIES

108th Field Artillery Will See Themselves in Action on Screen

The 108th Field Artillery Regiment will enjoy the novelty of seeing themselves as others saw them at a smoker in the old Second Regiment Armory, Broad and Diamond streets, tonight. Motion pictures of them will be shown, taken when they were in training at Camp Hancock, Ga.

Eight hundred men are expected to be present, many of whom were under fire in Chateau-Thierry, Fismes, Fismette, the Argonne, and in Belgium.

The Cop on the Corner

"TUS all off, Mike," says Maggie with a sigh. "There'll be no stick in y'r plum puddin' this Christmas."

"Nor any kick in me mince pie, either," I add. "Shure me scourin' hopes fr a wet Christmas 'n a damp New Year is knock'd sky high be th' Supreme Court. While us coppers is used t' bearin' up un'd'r heavy blows 'twill seem passin' strange not t' step in th' corner grogg'ry and git th' usual Christmas gift of a see-gar light, 'n a coathanger or th' expected 'n' a pair o' ties. Still, as me fren Judge Harrigan opines, it'll mean a heap happier Christmas fr th' fam'ly o' miny a poor workin' man."

"Shure will," says Maggie. "In furthermore this Leo Crossen, a right handy lad fr'm Scranton, app'nt'd prohibi-shun agint here, says he'll shut th' lid down tight on all futur' formin' o' that well-known show which is 'Tin Nights in a Barroom.'"

"This Crossen lad is th' goods," says I. "In a real terror t' bootleggers. He used t' be a baseball pitcher 'n' as such is well able t' detect highballs, puss'y eat cafes 'n' other drinks—plain 'n' fancy. Th' town shure will be a de-sect o' Sabary."

"Mebbe so 'n' mebbe not," speaks up Maggie. "Tim Regan was tellin' me only yest'rdy that whin they wint through a drunk 'n' disorderly case at th' Cintr'l station las' Sund'y th' turn-key come across all sorts o' bottles in his clothes. There was a pint o' gas-oline, 'n' two gills o' Jamacy Ging'r. As a gran' cli-max, th' disk serg'nt, makin' a final round-up pulls out a bottle label'd—Dhector Fakem's Re-ally Liver Compound."

MISS HELEN TAFT DEFENDS WOMEN COLLEGES OF TODAY

With Dean Ada L. Comstock, of Smith College, Takes Exception to Criticisms Made by Dr. Mabel Robinson

ARE women's colleges out of date?

Miss Helen Taft, acting president of Bryn Mawr, and Dean Ada L. Comstock, of Smith College, take exception to the ideas and criticisms put forth in a report by Dr. Mabel Louise Robinson in the bulletin published by the Federal Bureau of Education attacking the curriculum of women's colleges.

Dr. Robinson takes the stand that the colleges do not prepare students for their after-life, have failed to keep pace with the times and do not provide vocational training.

"I know that there is at present a tendency toward vocational training," says Miss Taft, "and we have departments of education and sociology. But even in sociology it is necessary for a student to take a year of post-graduate work before she can become a trained social worker."

No Time for Practical Training

"We think that it is not possible to give practical training together with the amount of fundamental training and cultural study that we want to give the students at Bryn Mawr."

Dr. Robinson cited as examples of the lack of vocational training that fewer women were entering the profession of teaching, the one field which was formerly the natural outlet for college students. Miss Taft and Dr. Comstock agree that the reason for a falling off in this field is not the lack of training but the lack of sufficient compensation.

"Dr. Robinson's charge that the women's colleges make almost no attempt to correlate a student's studies with her future career is a statement which was obviously framed without access to all the facts," said Dean Comstock. "She has drawn a picture of the women's college in which one is led to see the student body confining itself almost wholly to the so-called cultural subjects, and being deprived of an opportunity for instruction in any branch of learning which may prove of practical benefit in after years. This picture, as far as Smith College is concerned, at least, is untrue."

"Without attempting to give a complete analysis of the curriculum I wish merely to point out that Smith College offers instruction in architectural design, landscape gardening, horticulture, chemistry, economics, government, sociology, education, modern drama, modern languages, geology, hygiene, psychology and mental hygiene. No college turns out lawyers or doctors, or is expected to do so. Professional training is the province of the professional school. The studies named, however, direct interest along professional lines and afford preparation for professional study.

"I am a little surprised that the government bureau should take up the teaching situation without mentioning the low rate of pay. As it now stands, this pay is prohibitive, and no woman can be expected to take it when she can do better in other fields of work. It is largely for the purpose of alleviating this grievous situation, by the way that Smith's alumnae are now seeking to raise a new endowment fund of $4,000,000."

Bryn Mawr is also having a campaign for $2,000,000 to be used to increase the salaries of the faculty which have continued at the present figures since before the war.
