CERT ist, necessitated the substitution of Leo Ornstein in the MacDowell Concerto in D minor No. 2 at the last moment., Mr. Ornstein played the same concerto with the Philadelphia Orchestra last season, but his performance last evening was about the best he has yet given in Philadelphia. He played the beautiful work with great.sympathy and excellent tone quality. The accompaniment of the orchestra, however, might have been better. Mr. Ornstein's tone, while fine in quality, is not large, and it would have added to the effectiveness of the performance had only a part of the strings of the orchestra been used instead of the full body. There were many places where the soloist could be heard with difficulty, and Mr. Monteux did not always keep exact pace with the pisno. The program ended with the pisno. orchestra in so perilous an artistic position.

Mr. Monteux opened his pregram with the Beethoven Symphony No. 6, the "Pastoral," a composition which was played by our own orchestra only a ittle more than a week ago. Mr.
Monteux's reading of the symphony was less impassioned than that of Mr.
Stokowski, but was a clear and dignified conception. It was performed with great attention to beauty of tone and without dynamic extremes. His tempos Russett, Miss Ahna Aloro, Aliss Alica Russett, Miss Edith Russett, Miss Elva Krause, Miss Edith Russett, Miss Anna Collett, Miss Marie Keck, Mr. and Mrs. John Welden, Mr. William H.
