DEPEND ON FIRMNESS FOR DOWNHILL SHOTS

IE familiar little white golf pill swooped down out of the sky and came bobbing cheerfully down the fairway to a point where we were enjoying the gripping winter winds at Bala Golf Club.

The ball was on a downhill lie, calling for a shot which is probably messed up more by golfers in general than many another, because for the most.

House I play the ball off my center, keeping a firm stance. My weight shifts from left to right and back again. I come back till my hands are shoulder high with the left arm straight. I mean to hit the ball first and then the sod, so that the club head is still descending when it takes the ball. This does not mean to chop at the ball, because the turf is struck some two inches ahead of the original position of the ball. I don't lay the clubhead open, but just as it naturally rests on the ground."

Hackney then landed on the ball successfully and a streak off the surface of the sod, just ahead of where the ball had been, illustrated his point.

But up walked "Wild Bill" Hackney, the sturdy pro out there, yanked out a trusty midiron and sent the ball sizzling away for a long one, just like that.

just like that.

"How'd you do it?" we asked timerously.
Bill registered surprise. In fact, he seemed annoyed at such a question, but here is his dope on the rites and ceremonies of the downhill lie, as shown in the accompanying illustrations.

"throughout."

"Hold the pivot," we nodded.

"Exactly." affirmed Bill, "and the side of a hill is no place to try any fancy footwork. The whole shot is in the firmness with which it is made and in taking the ball at just the right part of the swing. How the "stay-at-home" must repret his lack of enterprise, as he sits, one of an interested group, while some ex-Marine spins yarn after yarn (and true yarns they are, (on) of his adventures on toss ing seas and under tropic skies.

The Marine and the Wide World At the moment you are reading this there is Hardly a country on earth where there are not United States Marines, doing men's work

—yes, and playing, too, as real men play—storing up health and menories that will last them to the end of the chapter.

There are Marines down in Cuba, picturesque old Cuba, almost as Spanish today as when the red and yellow flag of Spain floated over Morro Castle. In Hait-the queer little republic, where the colored folks speak French, Ma rines are helping to slap bad little bandits on the wrist when they That's life-life with misbehave. ust enough danger in it to make

There are Marines walking the streets of London and Pares. They are hearing real ukeleles on a real beach at Wakaiki. They are in the Philippines and "somewhere east of Suez." where Mr. Kipling tells us "there ain't no ten commandments and a man can raise." mandments and a man can raise a thirst." Home Life of the Marines

No Marine over scems to stay in One place long enough to get rusty. When he is not just off for foreign ports or just coming home from service abroad, he is on one of the big battleships which are always on the move from one port to another. Today he may be in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and the next bound for France or Constantinople, or goodness knows

And when he's on duty in the States he may be at any one of a number of interesting places—Quantico, the station just out of Washington: the League Island Navy Yard, at Philadelphia: the Brooklyn Navy Yard, at New York; or he may be at San Diego, in sunny California, or Mare Island, in San Francisco Bay. Work Time for the Marine

The Marine's life is not all play. There's work to be done. But it's mun's work and interesting. There are short, snappy drills that teach a man to be on his toes. There are setting-up exercises that give a man a chest like a bar-There are hikes, short ones at that each a man to walk on his own two feet, and like it. And there's rifle practice. But that there's rifle practice. But that isn't work—that's sport. There is wireless telegraphy and signal work to be learned. There is training in scouting and wood-craft. Maybe you didn't know that every Marine is a regular Robinson Crusoe when it comes to making himself comfortable in a vild country. There is artillery practice and seamanship. For a Marine is a scattanship. For a marine is a sailor as well as a soldier. But it's good work—all of it.

In addition to giving a man physical fitness and mental alertness, the Marine Corps gives plenty of opportunity for learning a trade that will mean big money for him after his discharge. Thousands of ex-Marines have immediately been taken into well-paying jobs in civil life as aviators, airplane mechanics, gas engine mechantes, chauffeurs, wireless operators, sters, barbers, ball players, chefs, bakers, electricians, foremen, etc., etc.

An honorable discharge after two, three or four years' service in the Marines is the best letter of recommendation any man

The Marine Corps wants only GOOD men, but they don't have to be giants, just ordinarily healthy. Don't say, "I can't pass the test," until you have tried. The doctors are kindly and courteous them a chance to look you over. Send for booklet.
