

Bergdoll's Court-Martial Starts in N. Y. : Youngest of Twenty-Three : Dogs Fed by Bottle

THE COURT-MARTIAL of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the wealthy draft dodger, started yesterday at Governors Island, N. Y. In the general view of the room in Corbin Hall, where the trial is being conducted, Bergdoll is seated to the extreme left, his attorney, Harry Weinberger, sitting at the same desk, while in the background and to the right are members of the court-martial and court attaches. In the other view Bergdoll is entering Corbin Hall just before the trial, using his hat to hide his face from the cameramen. Close on his heels is a soldier, his guard, carrying a club. At the left of the page is Todd Daniel, federal agent, and at the right is John J. O'Connor, an operative in the federal service, witnesses in the case
