BOLSHEVISM'S GROWTH

Triumph of the Extremists Over the Moderate Elements of European Socialism Shown in Geneva Congress

By B. F. KOSPOTH Correspondent of the Evening Public Ledger in Switzerland

Geneva, March 11. THE adjournment of the Socialis Congress which was to have been held in Geneva in February is regarded in well-informed circles here as the be-ginning of the end of the "Second International" and the triumph of the ex-tremists over the more moderate elements of European socialism. It is now stated that the congress will meet in July, but there is reason to believe that

July, but there is reason to use it will never take place at all. Another conference is being arranged instead. The French Socialist party the Swiss Socialists to has requested the Swiss Sociali convoke as soon as possible the Socialist parties who have already adhered to Lenine's "Third International," the parties who have left the second with parties who have left the second with-out as yet having joined the third, and the left wings of the parties still be-longing to the second, with the object of reconstituting a "United Interna-tional"—that is to say, of concluding a definite alliance with the Russian Bol-showing a second second second second second showing a second second second second second second showing a second second second second second second showing a second se sheviks.

T WAS this undisguised plan of the French and English extremists to effect a union with Lenine that forced the isolated labor leaders who have still remained faithful to the parliamentary principles of the "Second Interna-tional" to postpone the proposed Geneva conference, which under the cir cumstances would have infallibly ended with the creation of a vast Bolshevil organization. But, although the offi-cial decease of the "Second International" has thus been deferred, it is virtually dead already, and it is to be feared that all attempts to resuscitate it will prove unavailing. There is, in fact, nobody left today in the poor, old-fashioned "Second In-ternational" except the British Socialist party, a minority of the French So cialists and a few Scandinavians. Al All the rest of the European Socialists have reduction of armaments. The league is deserted it, irresistibly attracted by the in existence already in spite of the delay Red magnet of Moscow, and renounced its principles even when 'they deigned to attend its meetings. the Governor is due to his desire to attach the Progressive Republicans in the state to him through the influence of Mr. Pinchot: but he denies that there was any politics in the appointment. Until evidence is offered to prove the contrary, it will be best to assume that the compelling reason behind the apnointment is the desire of the Governor to put the work of forest conservation in the hands of a man about whose interest in the subject there is no doubt. Mr. Pinchot is now in the right place.
