Everybody's Business

The other day in a Milwaukee shop a woman worker admired a fur coat but had only part of the cash necessary to purchase.

The proprietor graciously agreed to cash two one-hundred-dollar Liberty Bonds for $140 as part payment, and the woman agreed very happily.

This shopkeeper later volunteered the information that most of his trade could not afford his furbelows, but were glad to let him have their bonds as they didn't appreciate their value.

Within five years 20,000,000 people have bought government bonds-any bonds-for the first time in their lives-they did it for patriotic
