

SHOW YOUR COLORS! GREEN RAGE TODAY

All Races and Creeds Join in Tribute to St. Patrick; Irish Hold Many Fetes

SPECIAL CHURCH SERVICES

This is the day the world wears green and talks with a bit of a brogue. It's the anniversary of the death of St. Patrick, Ireland's patron, celebrated by most people without respect of creed or race.

First of all, of course, it is an Irish festivity and the Irish are holding many celebrations.

Most Catholic churches had special masses commemorative of the day. Most notable of these was at St. Patrick's Church, Twentieth and Locust streets, where, according to custom, Archbishop Dougherty said a solemn pontifical mass. The sermon, a paenegyric of the saint, was preached by the Rev. Joseph A. Whelan, recently appointed chancellor of the archdiocese.

Another unusual religious devotion will be held this evening at the Church of the Annunciation, Tenth and Dickinson streets. This will be the recitation of the rosary by the Irish-speaking members of the congregation in Gaelic, by the Rev. Edmund O'Shea, a native of Ireland and assistant at the church.

The green, white and orange colors of the young Irish republic were displayed in many places today. Seamus O'Doherty, member of the American commission on Irish independence, wrote to numerous business houses several days ago asking them to decorate with the new flag, denoting harmony between both factions in Ireland, not only today but all this week.

In the parish hall throughout the city this evening there will be Irish plays and Irish music, folk dancing and other forms of observance. One of the events of this evening is the "Philanthropic Progress," which will be given by an organization of young people at the Bellevue-Stratford, the proceeds to go to charity.

The most notable event each recurring St. Patrick's Day is the dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. This year's will be the 149th. It will start at 6:30 o'clock in the Bellevue-Stratford. The dinner will mark the induction into office of Judge Joseph P. Rogers as president of the organization, in succession to Judge Charles B. McMichael.

Mayor Moore will be one of the honored guests at the dinner and is expected to make an address. Among those who are expected to speak are Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri; James A. Flaherty, supreme grand knight of the Knights of Columbus; Strickland L. Gallian, of Baltimore; Charles D. McAvoy, the new United States district attorney for eastern Pennsylvania; the Rev. William C. Casey, General Fitzgerald and Father Kelly, chairman of the Sixty-ninth New York Division.

The annual St. Patrick's day ball and musicale of the Pentecost Republic Club, of the Forty-fourth ward, is to be held this evening at Maennerbush Hall, Forty-fifth street and Westminster avenue, the proceeds from which will be given to charity. Well-known soloists are to sing the familiar Irish melodies, directed by Magistrate Maxwell Stevenson, Jr.

Thomas J. Weidon, financial secretary of the club, heads the committee in charge of the affair and Lawrence Costigan will be in charge of the music. The County Kerry Men's F. and M. Association will hold its thirteenth annual ball at Eagles' Temple, Spring Garden and Broad streets. The committee in charge are J. P. Dowd, John O'Callaghan, Joseph O'Sullivan, Joseph Enright and James Fitzgerald, chairman.

This is donation day for the Sisters of St. Joseph, who are making their annual appeal for contributions of money, clothing or groceries to help in their work of caring for orphaned children.

A large rummage sale given by St. Edmund's Home for Crippled Children opens today. The home is trying to raise funds for an additional building, as so many applicants have to be turned away. Mrs. John C. Sheehan, president of the home, is chairman of the committee in charge.

The Fativity minstrels are holding an entertainment today and tomorrow at Nativity Hall, Belgrade street and Allegheny avenue. A sketch has been written for them by P. A. Bulik, Jr., who takes a leading part, supported by Jack McGovern, Joe Lyons and Frank Harrigan.

GREAT IRISH PARADE IN N. Y.

Tri-Color of Republic Replaces the Green: Reviewed by De Valera

New York, March 17.—(By A. P.)—The traditional "wearing of the green" in St. Patrick's Day parades on Fifth avenue was today to the wearing of the green, white and yellow—the tri-color of the "Irish republic"—in honor of Eamonn De Valera, head of the unrecognized government, who reviewed 25,000 marchers from St. Patrick's Cathedral.

The parade was a "Free Ireland" demonstration, the like of which New York has never before witnessed. It also took on a "Free India" aspect, for more than 1000 representatives of that race marched with the sons of Erin.

While the colors of the Emerald Isle naturally predominated, the Stars and Stripes led the parade, followed by the "Fighting Irish Sixty-ninth," formerly the 153th United States Infantry. These veterans of the world war, who covered themselves with glory on the battlefields of France, wore their overseas equipment and steel helmets.

BANK STILL HUNTS RUNNER AND $5000

Northern National Cashier Says Veteran May Have Suffered Return of Shell Shock

Norman Richards, shell-shocked veteran of the world war, who disappeared mysteriously yesterday afternoon while on his way to the Northern National Bank with $5000 in cash and checks, belonging to the bank, is still missing this morning.

H. E. Schuelter, cashier of the bank, which is at Seventh and Dauphin streets, said this morning that, in addition to having been seriously shell shocked overseas, the messenger had also been rendered deaf.

"I have formed no opinion as to how the boy disappeared," said Mr. Schuelter. "It may be that he had a return of the shock, and rambled off, and is still wandering aimlessly about."

"Then, too, it is possible that he may have met with an accident, due to his deafness," Richards, who lives at Rutledge, Delaware county, was on his way from the office of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., at Sixth and Diamond streets, to the bank. He carried the cash and checks in a satchel to deposit for the insurance company.

The loss is covered by insurance. According to officials of the bank, Richards had been employed there for some time as a runner and had given every evidence of honesty. They had trusted him much larger sums of money without hesitancy.

He left the bank at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and should have returned with the deposit in three-quarters of an hour, according to Mr. Schuelter.

When 4 o'clock came and the messenger had not returned officials of the bank got in touch with the insurance company and learned that Richards had been there and left with the money.

The case was then turned over to the police. Police of Swarthmore, which is near Philadelphia, had found no trace of Richards this morning.

Before becoming messenger of the bank Richards lived at Drum, a small town in Luzerne county.

CLERK AND SENIOR TEACH HIGH SCHOOL

West Philadelphia Forced to Use Instructors Who Have Not Gone to Normal

BUSINESS CLASSES GROW

The scarcity of permanent teachers and of substitute teachers is so keenly felt in Philadelphia that a clerk in the office of the West Philadelphia High School for Girls and a recent high school graduate, without normal school training, have both been drafted into the present teaching staff of the school.

Owing to the large increase in the number of pupils electing commercial work this season, the department was suddenly confronted with a need for three more teachers. By a shifting of classes a teacher in the mathematics department was transferred to work in the commercial department. Miss Beryl Satterfield, a senior who graduated last February and who contemplated entering teacher-training work at Temple University, was asked to return, and Miss Frances Tobin, a clerk in the office, was put in charge of several of the practical business classes. Miss Tobin had had some experience in teaching commercial subjects at the night high school. She has been teaching regularly for more than a month.

Substitutes Hard to Find "I don't believe that you will find our school at all unusual in this," said Parke Schoch, principal of the High School, "but the shortage of regular teachers in commercial subjects are always hard to find, and the waiting lists have been exhausted for some time. We have had an examination recently and there should be probably fifteen or more qualified teachers available very soon."

Nine-tenths of our faculty are college graduates, and that's another problem we have to face in the teacher situation. Many of the pupils who want to teach no longer want to teach grade schools with a minimum salary of $1000 and a maximum of $1800. With the School of Education at the University of Pennsylvania open to women, it is a comparatively simple matter for them to spend four years instead of two and be qualified for high school teaching, for which the maximum is more than $2000.

Compete With Business Houses "We are in strong competition with business, and more of our pupils enter commercial courses every semester, for in business the beginner can earn more money than a beginning teacher who has spent two additional years in training."

Mr. Schoch said that the girls were urged to go into teaching, but that it was virtually impossible to induce them to go to normal school under the financial conditions of the present system.

CLEVELAND BANK ROBBED Cleveland, March 17.—(By A. P.)—Two armed bandits entered the Lorain avenue branch of the Cleveland Trust Co. when the bank opened this morning, held up Cashier George Travnikar while he was making up a payroll, secured $12,000 in cash and escaped in an automobile.

On account of the great quantity of mail still to be opened in the local office of the Internal Revenue Department, the income tax returns for the Philadelphia district for 1919 will not be announced for several days.

More than $11,000,000 had been received Monday for this district. Among the checks was one for $3,000,000, the largest income tax payment made in this district. This came from a large corporation.

Many delinquents called at the revenue office yesterday to pay their tax, and virtually all, it is said, had reasonable excuses for their tardiness.

Mrs. Elizabeth Greenwood, in a will probated today, disposes of $20,000 in public bequests. The gifts are made through members of her family and are not enumerated in the will.

An inventory in the estate of William C. May shows it to be worth $234,150.75. Of this amount $154,788.27 represents his interest in Johnathan May & Sons, ship brokers.

The estate of Samuel S. Thompson is appraised at $102,103.42. An issue of $65,000 of second mortgage bonds of the Philadelphia Windsor Hotel Co. is included. A claim of $54,584.11 for rent against the hotel company is appraised at $5000.

Dickinson Alumni Back Him for Supreme Court Philadelphia alumni of Dickinson College have endorsed Judge Sylvester B. Sadler, of the Cumberland County Court, for appointment to the Supreme Court to fill a vacancy which soon will exist.

Resolutions were adopted urging the appointment of Judge Sadler when Dickinson men met at the armory of the State Fencibles, Broad and Race streets, last night. The meeting was called by Thomas S. Lanard. A committee named to further the candidacy of the Cumberland jurist comprises Mr. Lanard, James A. Tanner, Claude L. Roth, Boyd Lee Spahr and Murray H. Spahr, Jr.

Judge Sadler has occupied the chair of professor of law at Dickinson for many years. He is a member of the class of '95 college and '98 law.

CITY HALL AGOG AT RUM CARAVAN

From Politicians to Clerks They Gaze Sorrowfully at Guarded Wet Spot

FLEET MOVES 'MID SIGHS

In so far as City Hall is concerned, Philadelphia's official business was allowed to "go hang" till after 10 o'clock this morning, while department heads, councilmen, clerks, stenographers, police, detectives, judges, et al., gathered at the windows and gazed down into the City Hall courtyard.

There, surrounded by blue cloth and brass buttons, was a traveling oasis, a caravan of crystallized cheer. 12,000 quarts of Maryland whisky, 100 proof, thief proof and thirst proof, drawn up in the very midst of the great American desert.

City Hall attaches stood at the windows as so many little birds, charmed by a nighty serpent, or, so to speak, a thousand potential serpents of a true long since driven from America by Mr. Volstead.

Mayor Moore hunted for Durell Shuster, his secretary, and found him at a second-story window, gazing sadly down on the liquor.

The Mayor could not reach his secretary for the crowd. Charles B. Hall, vice floor leader in Council, expressed regret that he had not known of the presence of the array of aromatic alcohol during the night. Friends say Mr. Hall is an expert on block and tackle methods. There are windows just above where the seven truckloads of liquor stood.

At 10:30 o'clock the train of transient trouble, loaded on seven trucks, folded its tent, and under the superintendence of the sheriff, one F. Charles Gladding, president of the Gladding Express Co., of Baltimore, stole away, albeit not "stealthily" nor without protest.

It was last seen winding its way across the arid stretches of New Jersey sand in the direction of New York. It arrived in Philadelphia last night from Baltimore, and was held until this morning while prohibition agents verified a permit issued to Mr. Gladding by Maryland authorities. The liquor is consigned to Henry Bradley, of 905 West Forty-ninth street. It is valued at from $100,000 on up.

IT is pleasant to awaken in the clear air and to see the treetops of Rock Creek Park below your window; to smell the fragrance of the woods from your sleeping-porch. The Wardman Park Hotel, overlooking official Washington, has the restful charm of the country.
