Watampoo's Trick

OLD WATAMPOO, the medicine man, when he saw that the Indian boys were excited over the idea of hunting wild bears, raised his voice again, "Ul-la-ul-la-ul-la! There are wild bears among the caves and crags on the hill where the pine trees grow. Brave Indian boys will find them and kill them."

The four Indian lads gripped their bows and arrows the tighter.

"Ugh! Brave Indian boys will find wild bears and kill them."

"Ugh! Brave Indian boys will find wild bears and kill them."

"Ur-ow! Ur-ow!" growled the smarting medicine man, frantically climbing helicine man, who thought the bows of the long at the mercy of the wild bears. He had, from the shelter of the bushes, poked a string through the bows using a stick to do it with.

Chuckling evilly, old Watampoo crept away unseen. He carried the bows to the top of a cliff and hurled them into the valley below.

"Ugh! Bears can eat White Spirits now," he grunted.

"Ur-ow! Ur-ow!" growled the smart-ing medicine man, who though the bows of the long help?

The four Indian lads gripped their bows and arrows the tighter.

"Ugh! Brave Indian boys will find wild bears and kill them." they repeated, and they set off on a run for the hill where the pine trees grew. Peggy and Billy followed on the back of Balky Sam.

It didn't take long to reach the hill where the pine trees grew. There they found the caves and crags of which Watampoo had told, but there were no bears in sight.

just then. They were feeding in the woods.
Crafty old Watampoo, following the children, but keeping out of their sight, saw one of the bears in the distance. It was slowly climbing toward the crags and caves, but was feeding on the way, finding lots of nice grubs under stones and fallen trees.
"Ugh!" grunted Watampoo to himself. "While Indian boys make fire, old bear will come creeping up behind. Ugh! He will eat the white strangers."
The Indian boys quickly picked up enough wood to make a fire. "I'll light it for you," cried Billy, and they were only too ready to let him do it. They would have had to start a blaze by rubbing sticks together, while Billy, through his strange power, could bring a flame from his foot. Of course this fame was just the flame of a match which Billy struck on his shoe, but the Indians, not having seen matches before, didn't know this, and thought it was magic fire-making.

Peggy was rather nervous over this bear hunt. "Hadn't you better get your bows and arrows ready so that when the bear rushes out of the cave you can shoot him?" she asked.

The Indian boys turned to pick up their bows, and as they turned they gave a cry of alarm. The bows were crawling along the ground like snakes.—crawling toward the nearby bushes.

At this shout the crawling bows gave a great leap, a leap that carried them out of sight in the bushes.

"Magic! Evil magic!" whispered the Indian lads, crouching close to Peggy, Billy and Balky Sam.

But it wasn't magic. It was old the Indian lads, crouching close to Peggy, Billy and Balky Sam.

FURS AND MYSTERY

Thirteenth Article of a Copyrighted Series.

Kolinsky is a small and rather handsome fur-bearer, resembling the American Mink, or European Marten, and is known abroad as Siberian Sable, Tartar Sable and Siberian

The fur, however, is unlike that of either the Sable or Marten, being shorter, harsher and lighter in tint than that of the Sables, the general color being a bright golden, handsome shade of yellow, or brownish yellow, quite uniform in tone on all parts of the body.

Kolinsky is made up natural or dyed Mink color, or much darker shades of brown. The best skins are found in Kola, Russia, while large numbers are obtained in China.

One of the many beautiful features of Kolinsky are the tails, which are used extensively in trimming capes, coats and stoles, either natural or when split and used flat.

Like all other furs of quality, Kolinsky is imitated by cheaper and inferior furs of various kinds, such as Rabbit,

It is therefore an important thing that you buy your Kolinsky cape or coat in a store of established reliability if you would really get the fur of the little Asiatic animal and not the skins of its lowly imitators.

Another chance one takes in dealing with a furrier without reputation is that one must depend entirely upon the dealer's word, for he has no other way of knowing whether the fur in question is of the finer Russian grade or of the poorer quality from China-if it should happen to be a genuine Kolinsky at all. Which emphasizes once more the great necessity to
