

SIMS SUMMARIZES CASE AGAINST NAVY

Arraigns Department on Thirteen Counts, Charging Errors and Costly Delays

CONCLUDES HIS TESTIMONY

By the Associated Press. Washington, March 18.—Concluding his long arraignment of the Navy Department's conduct of the war, Rear Admiral Sims today laid before the Senate investigating committee thirteen specific counts in his indictment charging mistakes and costly delays.

Refraining his denunciations that his criticisms were aimed at no individual, but that "responsibility for any failures rested upon the Navy Department as an organization," Admiral Sims summed up his charges as follows:

"That, in spite of the fact that war had been going on for nearly three years, and our entry into it had been imminent at least from February 2, 1917, the vessels of the navy were not ready for war service when the United States entered the war.

"That the first few months after America entered the war were extremely critical ones for the whole allied cause, due to the success of enemy submarines.

"That this critical situation was made clear to the Navy Department a few days after America entered the war and repeatedly thereafter by cables and letters, supported by independent advice to the government from the American ambassador in London and by Mr. Hoover.

"That the Navy Department supplied me with no plans or policy covering our participation in the war for three months after our entry thereinto.

"That, having information as to the critical situation of the Allies, the Navy Department did not promptly assist them, and thereby prolonged the war by delaying the sending of anti-submarine vessels, upon reaching Europe for nearly a month after war was declared and two half months elapsing before thirty vessels arrived.

"That the Navy Department failed to appreciate the military value of time.

"That the Navy Department violated fundamental military principles in attempting to formulate war plans of operation without having sufficient knowledge of the whole situation.

"That the department's representatives with the Allies' admiralties was not supplied during the most critical months of the war, either by adequate personnel or by adequate forces that could have been supplied.

"That the Navy Department violated fundamental military principles in dispersing forces away from the critical area in order to meet diversions of the enemy.

"That the Navy Department, in the first months of the war, attempted the decision of details although 3000 miles distant from the scene of active operations, where the situation was changing from day to day.

"That the Navy Department, in not clearly defining the responsibility and delegating authority to its representative in Europe, failed to follow sound principles, common alike to the business and military professions.

"That the Navy Department, by controlling the operations and movements of certain forces within the war area, violated the fundamental military principle of unity of command.

"That the Navy Department failed to keep its representative abroad completely informed as to its plans affecting dispatch and disposition of forces in the war zone and frequently reached decisions in such matters through information gained from sources other than its representative in the war zone."

Mr. Ziegler is president of the Laymen's Association which met in St. Matthew's Church, Fifty-third and Chestnut streets.

"A year ago," said Mr. Ziegler to the laymen, "we were rejoicing that our beloved country had severed its participation in the liquor traffic. We were rejoicing also that the nations of the world were seeking to arrange terms of peace after the war."

"Today we have awakened to the fact that the foes of liquor must not throw their armor," George G. Ziegler today told the laymen.

"And we are still awaiting the consummation of world peace."

"Besides these disturbing issues are others which strike at the very vitals of our country. There are labor issues also which endanger the relations between the employer and the employe."

"While the serious-minded are viewing these matters with uneasiness, the larger number of people seem to have abandoned themselves to reckless pleasure and extravagance."

Prayer Only Remedy
Mr. Ziegler said that the only remedy for present world conditions lay in prayer and the preaching of the gospel. "Civilization has failed to meet the issue," he said. "It remains for the Gospel of Christ to do so."

SUFFRAGE DEMAND WRONG, SAYS GRAY

Former Judge Tells Delaware Legislature It Invades State Rights

OPPOSED TO RATIFICATION

Wilmington, Del., March 18.—Former Federal Judge George Gray today issued a statement to the effect that he considered it unwise for the Legislature, which meets next week, to ratify the suffrage amendment to the federal constitution.

"This is not the time," the judge says, "to present arguments upon the general question of woman suffrage, because we are now confronted with the necessity of a great wrong being inflicted upon the people of the state by hasty and ill-considered ratification of the proposed amendment to the constitution of the United States."

"In the first place the proposal to bring about this great change by an amendment to the federal constitution, thus conceding the will of many of the states, violates principles of self-government that have hitherto been considered sacred, and challenges the right and ability of the peoples of the several states to wisely regulate matters of their own concern."

"I know how readily the skillful advocates of this measure point to the fact that the will of many of the states, violated by such an amendment, but that amendment grew out of the Civil War, which for four years had devastated and convulsed the whole nation, and in the midst of a political and social crisis that could only be dealt with in that way. It was under the compulsion of the circumstances attending that great cataclysm that the right of each state to control its own electorate was for the time disregarded, a right which all our history, both before and since the outbreak of the Civil War, has been regarded as sacred."

"We have reason to believe that a majority even of the women of this state are opposed to the ratification of this amendment. Still more reason have we to believe that a majority of the electorate of the state are so opposed; but whether we are justified, or not, in this belief, have we not a right to demand that a Legislature that has received no mandate from the people on this subject shall not at this extraordinary session forestall the people's right to pass upon so momentous a question?"

"No member of the Legislature is called upon to declare himself either in favor of or opposed to woman suffrage, and to renew his faith in government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Deaths of a Day

WASHINGTON S. VALENTINE
Founder of Latin-American Enterprises Dies in Atlantic City
Atlantic City, March 18.—(By A. P.)—Washington S. Valentine, financier and founder of numerous Latin-American business enterprises, died here last night following an operation for cancer of the stomach.

Mr. Valentine was born in St. Louis sixty-one years ago. At an early age he became interested in mining projects in Honduras and was one of the first to introduce modern machinery in the Central American mines.

Harry T. Mitchell
Harry T. Mitchell, head of the promotion department of Du Pont's, Wilmington, and prominent in Masonic circles, died yesterday. He was fifty-three years old. His death was announced Saturday afternoon, from the home of his brother-in-law, Judson R. Hoover, Moylan-Rose valley.

William C. Ogden
William C. Ogden, for many years house sergeant at the Fourth and Race streets police station, who has been in the Women's Homeopathic Hospital since February 4, died there last night of heart disease. He was fifty-eight years old and lived at 3121 West Cumberland street. Mr. Ogden became a member in the police service and could have retired on the pension list, but preferred to remain in uniform.

W. H. LIPPINCOTT DIES
Portrait Painter, Born Here, Succumbs in New York
William Henry Lippincott, noted portrait and landscape painter, was born and received his early art education in this city, died suddenly Tuesday in New York city of heart disease. He was seventy-one years old. He was secretary of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts.

Mr. Lippincott was the son of the late Isaac and Emily L. Lippincott. He began the study of art in the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. In 1874 he went to Paris, where he remained eight years as a pupil of Leon Bonnat. On his return to this country he established a studio in New York city, and soon afterward became professor of painting at the National Academy of Design.

Mr. Lippincott was made an associate national academician in 1884, and twelve years later was made a national academician. He was a member of the American Water Color Society, the Society of American Etchers and the Century Association.

Memories of Past Keep Bryan Alive

up with the Chicago soulmate who was so worked up over "the single moral standard" that she shot herself and the fellow she was living with.

REMAINS "A GOOD STORY"

He remains without doubt "a good story," but he isn't a political force. He is sacrificing his family to editors, correspondents, editorial writers, joke-smiths and white paper manufacturers, but not to the "people." The "people" are thinking of beer, the high price of white beans, bonuses, the decay of empire, including Woodrow Wilson's wood-sawing, but not of Mr. Bryan's sacrifice.

Probably there arrived on the same train with Mr. Bryan a negro boy from Florida seeking his fortune, hoping, perhaps, to establish himself as a bootlegger or write prescriptions for the thirsty. History is silent. Well, this negro boy had exactly the same influence upon the fate of the treaty as Mr. Bryan's sacrifice.

No, it wasn't quite all the difference there. It was a difference of kind. He is a political leper. As soon as he is seen dining with Mr. Anderson of the Anti-Saloon League, he is taken on a battle with the Catholic Church to keep his hand in.

Political parties have one maxim as the campaign approaches. It is "Sh-sh; don't make a noise or you'll scare some of 'em away." The Republican have been sh-shing prudently ever since Mr. Will H. Hays, at the cost of much carfare and the wide distribution of his personal favors, achieved "harmony." The Democratic party is now sh-shing on boom.

They see the birds alighting near the lined twigs and "Don't make a noise or you scare some of 'em away." They have no voice to yell the glorious history of our self-governed commonwealth, and renew his faith in government of the people, by the people and for the people.

Surety Company and Not Bank Takes Action for Own Protection
A warrant has been sworn out by the National Surety Co. for the arrest of Norman Richards, missing bank messenger, who disappeared Tuesday with $2000 cash from the Northern National Bank. Officials maintain their belief that Richards, an ex-soldier and trusted employee, has either met with foul play or wandered off while suffering from a recurrence of the effects of shell shock. Search by the police and other means of possibly locating the missing bank messenger have thus far proved unsuccessful.

SAYS PEOPLE SHIRK RESPONSIBILITIES

The Rev. Dr. Charles Wood Calls This the Age of Systematized Selfishness

SPEAKS AT LENTEN SERVICE

"The people are riding themselves of all responsibility to their country, their community, their families and to God." In the course of a talk at the noon service at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church the Rev. Dr. Charles Wood, of the Church of the Covenant, at Washington, made the above comments today.

He divided the history of the world into four kingdoms and asserted that the present kingdom was that of systematized secularism and selfishness. After reviewing various periods which he said, showed the attitude of the people, Doctor Wood, in commenting on the present, said among other things:

"The people are bowing down to their idols which are as hideous as any that the Israelites worshiped. It appears as if the forces of unrighteousness are drawn together to deceive the forces of life."

In conclusion he said that if all the forces of the church came together under the leadership of Christ, they could bring about the conquering of the fourth kingdom.

HE LOVES CHILDREN, BUT—
Chronicle of Brief Romance of Frank and Angelina
When Mrs. Frank Furio died Frank thought of his schoolmate in sunny Italy years ago. He wrote Angelina that he was anxious to tell her of his love, and wanted her to come to him.

Angelina came, but not alone. Since the day when Frank and she used to play together, Angelina had married. She was living with her husband and seven children in Hartford, Conn. She bundled up her three youngest children, two, four and six years old, and set out on her romantic journey.

Frank loves children and had told Angelina so in his letter, but he did not expect her to appear with three, two, four and six year olds. He had expected her to come alone.

Magistrate Price heard the case today. Frank said he did not know Angelina was married when he wrote her. She was sent back to Hartford.
