Tin is Waterproof and Fireproof too.

A drunken old "bum" who was tarred and feathered said he didn't mind the tar, because it was waterproof, and he liked to have all water kept outside of him.

Tar may answer for waterproofing bums, but it is not good for roofs. Tin makes the ideal roof, for it is waterproof and fireproof, too. In an Indiana fire the flames leaped from one tar roof forty feet across a tin roof to another tar roof. The tin-roofed building between was the only one saved.

You can't make a mistake in roofing with tin. Ask any roofer to name the best brands. You are safe if he says "NU-DURA-TIN."

Uncommon Beauty

in Common Brick.

WE WHO can see Hall any day don't pay much attention to it; but ask the people who come every day from Arizona and Asia and Australia to see it, and they will tell you it is one of the most beautiful buildings in the world.

And it is built of common red brick.

Isn't it curious, when we have the best of all buildings and building materials right under our noses, that we go hunting all over the world for something not so good at three times the cost!

With different kinds of trimmings, common brick gives infinite variations of style and beauty—a maximum of value for a minimum of expense.

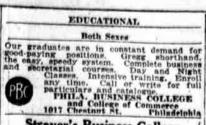

Get an architect who appreciates the possibilities of common brick, and who knows how to handle it.
