There are no parties planned for this with the exception of the Amherst Jr .. Musical Clubs, which are said to be the very first college organizations of the kind organized in America. The concert will open with the famous song, "Lord Jeffrey Amherst," which has been the introductory song of this "singing college of New England" ever since the founding of the musical association in 1821.

certain little girl who is very sweet and who has a very good time at the parties was going home from one some parties was going home from one some evenings ago and her mother said to her as they were riding along: "Well, dear. you had a good time, didn't you?" Being a wise mother she had marked the fact that there seemed to be some sort of fly that there seemed to be some sort of fly fin the ointment. "Oh yes," said the little sub-deb, "but I'd have had a better time if I had goue on that ride."

"Bide." asked the mother. "Yes, J.— "Ride?" asked the mother. "Yes. Jyou know, and they wanted B--- and me to go out for a ride during the party. knew you would not want me to go I said 'No', but B——went and they the M——to go, too. And I did so want to go.

And her mother, telling of the incident later, said: "Now you can realize how hard it is for the girls to be ladies these days. My little daughter, because she knew it was not the thing to do. had to stay in the dancing room and see two of her best friends among the boys depart with two other girls for nothing more por less than a 'joy ride,' and she wanted to go like everything.''

Don't you think that if cars were distributed by parents among the boys with a little more care, or with proper re-strictions, it might not be so easy to do the unconventional things (to say the least) which are being done by the young people of today?

Of course you will reply that a girl who is properly brought up will have the instincts of a lady and will not do these things. But, unfortunately, when the temptation to go off on a lark of the kind comes many do not stop to think; and if they can manage to slip out of the room without the eye of the hostess upon them they do it.

These things will have to be regulated at their source. The laxity has gone too far to depend on proper feelings about them. In this case cited the boys found two who were willing to go against one who refused.

All honor to that young girl who did refuse. I am proud to know her; but it beems to me if others are likely to accept these invitations the young owners of cars had better be restricted in their use, anyhow. NANCY WYNNE.

UPON THIS INTERESTING STREET IS TO BE FOUND AN INVALUABLE CLUS-TER OF THOSE SMALL SHOPS DISPLAY-ING THAT STYLE OF MERCHANDISE WHOSE EXCLUSIVENESS AND SUPE-RIOR QUALITY SO APPEAL TO THE WOMAN OF GOOD TASTE.

DOLO coats and capes are to be among the handlest. snappiest, most practical of the spring, summer and sarly fall wraps. They're unsurpassed for all sorts of sports, for town and country, mountains, shore, motoring, etc., being sufficiently light in weight for the warm days, yet having sufficient warmth for the cooler weather. Sterling's, at 1210 Walnut street, have some of the very best polo coats I have seen in my shopping trips. Not only have they four coat models which rival one another n chic and generally becoming lines, both three-quarter and full-length models, but there are polo capes as well. Both coats and capes are made from genuine camel's hair cloth in natural tan, navy and gray and at perfectly splendid prices for the quality, $59.50 for the coats and $69.50 for the capes.

T WOULD be well nigh impossible to find a more bewitching collection of cloth frocks than those to be seen at that artistic little shop of Benguyer's, 1214 Walnut street. There is a certain soft grace about them that somehow isn't expected in so severe a garment as a tailleur—a "femininity," one might almost say, a very charming characteristic. You will adore so inexpensive a model as a $42.50 naver to was at least $75. It is along lines designed for the slender, slightly jacketed and conservatively adorned with a lovely antique gold and dark blue embroidery. It s collarless and guimped in blue satin, with stunning Spanish pockets to relieve the straight lines of the skirt. It is but one of a whole group of fetching little models at equally inviting prices.

GENUINE Russian sables fit for the adornment of royalty are to be had at that fur establishment of highest class, the House of Wenger, at 1229 Walnut street. Here are kept only pelts of quality, furs which even the inexperienced can buy with the satisfaction of knowing that every fur garment, every fur-piece sold, is exactly what it is represented to be. So, as I said, here are real Russian sables of that durable softness. that subdued luster, characteristic of this regal fur. The House of Wenger is offering them most reasonably for the present high prices of such skins; namely, at from $300 to $600 a complete skin-which prices include the making. One skin, for example, will make one of those smart tiny neck-pieces new in demand for wear with cloth frocks or the spring suit.

THAT most marvelous shop of beautiful garments recently established in the Ritz-Carlton Hetel, Broad and Walnut streets, by J. M. Gidding, is apparently determired that Philadelphia women shall have the same opportunity as New York fashionables for buying the newest Parisian fashions in their home city. Models from Paris and New York are coming into the Philadel-phia shop with gratifying regularity. Just at present New York is quite a-thrill over a certain type of Eton suit now displayed at Gidding's. It is of fine pavy gabardine and has two tiers of the cloth accordioned and attached to a plain yoke and suspended over a plain foundation. The smart short Eton has a collar inlaid with brown leatherette ribbon and this is repeated in the girdle. The lines of the jacket are emphasized by rows of the tiniest of silvered buttons. This stunning model can be worn as a suit or a dress.

If YOU haven't a spring hat you're a bit behind the season, but your delay may be fortunate in that you can now drop into the Roseway Shop, at 1835 Walnut street, to look at a mighty attractive little group of spring hats specially priced at $14.50. They are fashioned along becoming, graceful lines and of the newest spring materials and straws. There are dress, semidress models and some of the niftiest little tailleurs. Picture a fine glossed navy straw, a lisere I believe, forming a crown, and a pointed, slightly roll brim of navy grosgrain ribbon. Crowning all is a navy tassel smartly swung to a silken cord of the same color. It's a very expensive looking little model—but it's to be had at that desirable price of $14.50, just as are quite a few other pretty chapeaux at that very nice shop

EXQUISITE blouses of a white French voile almost as filmy in appearance as georgette are to be had at one of the prettiest shops in town for $15.00. This is a very special price, indeed, for the blouses are entirely hand-made and are variously trimmed with real laces, or exquisitely hand-drawn and richly though conserva-tively hand-embroidered. They are sample blouses and I could discover no more than one of a kind—that is why they are so reasonably priced—but, really, that only makes them all the more desirable to women of exclusive tastes, doesn't it? The cuffs are beautifully made, too, always a proof of a well-fashioned blouse. This is only one of the many lovely things to be had at that alluring shop of Gertrude Wilkinson's, at 1316 Walnut street.
