

THE GLAD SURRENDER

By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

An Unexpected Trip

Two people who love each other and... Hazel Deyo Batchelor

WHAT is it, Crombie? Laurel asked as she stepped into the hall.

Mr. Burton is going away, Crombie returned. He told me to pack his things.

The Streets of Life Does that sound interesting? The title of the new serial story by HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Which will start on Monday, April 5. It is the story of a gentle, pretty girl who loved dainty things and was not allowed to indulge in them.

Look for it! The man who told her the message was for her, and Laurel hurried to her own sitting room to answer it.

Laurel! Oh, Laurel, I've been trying to get you all afternoon! Ted has been hurt and I'm terrified. Can you come to me?

There was a breathless moment of hesitation, while the wire sang and Laurel could almost hear Winona's breathing.

She couldn't go, not now with Granville planning to leave. She had to stay and Granville. It meant life, love, everything. He must not go away.

Laurel you're not going to fail me, came Winona's voice again. It was robbed of all its petulance, all its usual complacencies. She was depending on Laurel like a little child.

Fetch me immediately. And with her outer things still on, she went downstairs again in search of Crombie.

You don't know where Mr. Burton is, Crombie?

The man shook his head. And he didn't say when he would be back? Did he say what time he was planning to leave?

I think about midnight, Mrs. Burton.

Tell him that I was called out, that Mrs. Ranning's husband has been hurt and he's gone. She's heavily injured. Anything else? Crombie was waiting.

Laurel wanted to say, "Tell him not to go without seeing me," but she did not. All she said was, "I'll be back before he leaves," and hurried out.

When Laurel reached Winona's apartment the door was opened to her by Winona herself. Winona's eyes were red with crying; she looked disheveled. There was a smell of iodine in the air.

For a moment the two women embraced in silence and Winona choked. "What is it?" Laurel whispered. "Tell me, dear, if you can."

Oh, I've wanted you so. It will help me to tell you. You know how Ted is, walking along always with his head in the clouds. We had had a misunderstanding about nothing at all, but we were both hard and said horrid things.

And then—it happened! I suppose he was thinking about it. It was an automobile accident. His head was struck and he hasn't been conscious since. Oh, Laurel, what shall I do if he never does become conscious? What shall I do if I can't tell him "I'm sorry"? Winona's voice broke into a wail, she was like a terrified child.

The door of the bedroom was ajar. Through it Laurel could see a man's

"Oh, no!" Winona protested. "I'll nurse him. We don't need any one else." (Tomorrow, Laurel telephones too late.)

A Pretty Hat

If you happen to be the owner of a bride's hat, or light-colored hat made of georgette crepe, satin or horse-hair and trimmed with ribbon and flowers, and you find that it is out of style or that parts of it are beginning to wear, you will not be able to wear it this summer, you may be glad to know that it can be made over into a very attractive bonnet for a small girl.

Most of these hats are very simply made, generally with only a wire around the edge of the brim to keep it in shape. This can easily be cut and then drawn together to make it smaller and poke-shaped. The inner edge is then gathered directly on to the crown after the latter has been cut down or shirred to the correct size. Ribbons sewed on the under side of the brim at both sides look very pretty tied under the chin, and a real French touch is given if a small bunch of flowers is tucked on at a becoming angle. There is really no end to the possibilities that the materials in these otherwise useless hats will afford.

The doctor came out of the bedroom and Winona sprang toward him. "You mustn't think of things like that," she said reassuringly. "Of course he's going to come out of this all right."

"But if he shouldn't!" And then Winona the practical, the careless, the fool, I never thought it was wise to let a man know how much you cared. Ted really wasn't. And oh, Laurel, if he comes out of this I'll never, never hide my feelings again."

"He has had a bad conversation with a conscious yet. Go in, if you like, Mrs. Ranning. He'll need a nurse, shall I telephone?"
