FIGHT FAN WHO FAILED TO GET HIS SEAT WAS A FOOL TO STAND FOR IT GREAT CROWD SEES FIRST CAMDEN BOUTS

More Than Seven Thousand "If They Don't Fight Fans Look on as Herman. Jackson, Turner and Perry Win in Armory

By LOUIS H. JAFFE

THOUSANDS of Philadelphians, emu-I lating the immortal George Washington on his ley trip across the Delaware back in '76, ferryboated over the ware back in '76, ferryboated over the river—only there was no ice—to the city of Camden for the purpose of helping to welcome the inauguration of boxing in the big little burg. It looked as if the Quaker City fandom had taken a valention to visit Camden.

The latter had the crowd with him continually, shouting encouragement to the Syracuse lightweight, while jeers, hoots and catcalls were the reward of the victor. Brady's gameness had a lot to do in getting the support of the crowd.

Each of the matches, in which Joe O'Donnell. Ralph Brady. Joe Welsh and Ray Smith, respectively, were on and Ray Smith, respectively, were on the losing end, was an interesting, fast and spellbinding affair, with the possible exception, in spots, of the final fracas. In this bout Herman, the champ, slackened his pace at times, held on and detracted some of the sensationalism of the great fistic night. However, as a whole the program was a success, and all of the fans appeared well satisfied as they streamed out of the armory.

Herman and O'Donnell put on the final act. For three rounds it looked as if there was only one boxer in the ring. Herman, who cleanly and cleverly outboxed rugged young Mr. O'Donnell, Joey, however, never stopped, he continually bored in, but for the first nine minutes of action the Gloucester lad was unable to connect, with a single lossing Rules Broken (?)

The sixth went to the titleholder, who continued boxing carefully, winning the chapter purely through his superior cleverness. The chunky little O'Donnell, like so much dynamite, always was dangerous. Again in the seventh Joe split even for the round, while the Gloucester gloveman came back with so going to suggest a regulation to license all boxers, managers, handlers and secondary. Gloucester gloveman came back with so sensational a rally in the last frame, despite hard fighting by Herman, that Joe copped the eighth round. Herman's early advantage, however, could not be overcome by the willing Jersey youth. It was a case of the loser being the favorite with the crowd during and after the bout between Brady and Jackson. Jackson was the superior gloveman, by far, but Brady proved a will- tators of last night's bouts.

Before the start of the first bout in Camden last night, Commissioner John S. Smith instructed Referee Ertle and later advised Referee Brennan, "If they do not fight chase them from the ring." None of the boxers were chased.

cation to visit Camden.

There were more than 7000 fans among those in the Third Regiment Armory, which is to be known as the Camden Sportsmen's Club on boxing nights. To be sure, there were more than 7000 present because that many chairs were in the arena, each of which was occupied, while hundreds were standing at the rear of the club and many others—youngsters—were hanging on to the girders supporting the celling of the large structure.

Jackson clipped Brady on the jaw seventy-four times by actual count, Joe Cervino being the accurate and rapid-fire human adding machine, and not once was Ralph any way distressed. Most of the time Brady was the aggressor, and often Ralph scored heavily with straight lefts to Jackson's face; but Jackson was the harder puncher, administered the most punishment, and was the winner by the following score of rounds: Jackson, six; Brady, one; one even.

feetly good reasons: first, four stellar bouts, and, second, eight-round matches. Champion Petey Herman was the winner in the bantam battle, Willie Jackson won the lightweight number, Jack Perry showed to advantage in the welterweight setto, and the heavyweight went to Clay Turner.

The Losers

Smith, the Camden idol, found himself up against too clever an opponent. Turner is really a clever two-handed boxer for a big man and his long left enabled him to win on points from the world war veteran. The score for this bout was three for Turner, two for Smith and three ever. In the seventh round Smith twice staggered the Indian and had the better of that frame, but the sergeant failed to keep up his rally the sergeant failed to keep up his rally in the last session, which ended evenly. Scofield, a Pinchurst regular, with those figures. This made up the list of those breaking So in the first round and it took some rare golf to do it. The courses were inclined to be a bit heavy and winds carried the ball off the line, many times to add up the strokes. The field numbered 320, one of the largest that ever played in an amateur fixture and the class of all sections was well represented. Graham, Newton and Standish all played steady golf, Newton being spectacular.
