President Jordan says that his Philadelphia act is a good number. His troupe has everything, he claims, that goes to make up Rotarian punch and enough of it to show the rest of the fifth district or any district that the Philadelphia club is right there all six ways with the specified spirit.

The Philadelphians got into action as soon as they gathered for the Rotary special, which left the Reading Terminal at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and their motto all the way was 'business behind pleasure.' They had the first two cars of the special and led the Pullman parade of the delegates from Camden, Atlantic City, Wilmington, Chester, Baltimore and Lancaster.

PRIMARY SYSTEM

By the Associated Press New Brunswick, N. J., April 8.— Senator Hiram W. Johnson, in an ad-iress here last night, attacked New York's primary system as 'merely a left-handed way by which the bosses

'It is designed." he said, 'to prevent rather than permit expression of the voters' choice for President. The law was engineered by the machine organization, which hoped by passing a law of that sort to prevent the adoption of a real primary system.

"A few gentlemen in New York city, out of their own kindness and benevolence, have taken on themselves to se-lect the delegates who shall represent people at the convention and then, of the goodness of their hearts, permit the people to vote for the men they have selected." Senator Johnson predicted that when the New York delegates reach Chicago they will be carried by the tide of pub-lic sentiment into his camp. He also expressed confidence of carrying New Jersey in the primaries late this month. THE success of advertising . . . its value as a great economic force . . . the value of a properly worked-out advertising campaign for a sound product . . . these appeal to us most potently.

Because one success begets another, the legitimate practice of advertising exercises a salutary effect in many directions-and we are glad to take our hat off to another agency that shows a sincere and welldirected effort to give his client good ser-

' Not long ago a manufacturer and his advertising manager came into our offices and asked us to look over his plans and "copy" prepared by another agency.

After a thorough understanding of his proposition and a most careful scrutiny of his work, an executive of this organization turned to this advertiser and said:

"If we had done the work, we would have been mighty proud of it.'

Business is the "mother lode" of rich ore that we all can work.

There is no possibility of exhausting this mother lode . . . as a matter of fact its surface has hardly been scratched.

Skilled, careful exploitation of business increases the value of each particular "claim" and all others of a similar character.

Constructive or creative competition is a blessing to each concern that recognizes it. We take this opportunity to say "hail" to every advertising agency with vision big and broad enough to recognize this great economic principle.

Our recognition of this principle influences our relationship with other advertising agencies, with publications and advertisers.

It assists us in securing most for our clients in the way of "good will" and cooperative work of every character. It is one reason for our long association with our

Our record of continuous service with an account is unusually long. We have served our present clients on an average of seven years and six months. This record is getting constantly longer. As a basis of comparison, the average life of accounts with agencies in general is eleven months.

In 1919 our business increased 150 per cent. over 1918. Ninety-six per cent. of our total volume of business in 1919 was from concerns that had been with us for more than one year and in some instances up to twenty-five years.

These are impressive figures for any manufacturer to study who is ambitious to open up new markets for his product or increase its sales; to careful and conscientious executives who believe in thorough-going careful methods.

Please advise us if we may tell you more of our methods. An interview will not obligate you in the least.

Here's-a Spring Topcoat That's a Friend!

It's a KNITTED COAT-not a dress coat that you have to make a date with, but a hail-fellowwell-met sort of coat that doesn't care a hang about the social stuff, and yet can mix in any company and get away with it.

We have one ourselves. We use it for walking, riding, sitting on the porch, and hanging around generally. That is, when somebody else isn't using it. That's the only thing we have against it. It's too promiscuous. It makes friends with everybody.

But outside of that, it's all right.

Hanging in the hall, left lying over night on the porch, flung negligently over a chair, sat on and abused, it still comes back like a two-yearold when we put it on, because its workmanship is basically sound.

And remember, knitted coats are only a part of the topcoat story at Perry's.
