Nancy Wynne Tells of the Tableaux This Afternoon at the Bellevue-Stratford-She Sees Attractive Costume. Girl Scout, Benefit Successful

I SAW Mrs. William Hart in a Walnut street car yesterday looking, I thought, very haudsome. She was wearing a dark blue suit and a fox fur about her neck, which was one of those shaded furs from yellow to brown. Her hat was a small toque of fine black straw, the crown being slightly rounded above the brim, to stimulate a tam-o'-shanter, only it was too small to be a real tam. About the narrow, upturned brim was a moire vibbon band of Alice blue, which just matched Mrs. Hart's eyes, and it was most becoming with her wonderful half.

RANDMOTHER took Polly to church G for the first time on Sunday, and she was apparently prayerfully charmed with all the doings. She watched the boy choristers with round eyes and she folded her small hands deputity during the court of the cou eyes and she folded her small hands devoutly during prayers and behaved altogether beautifully. When they came home grandpa, who is always interested in finding out what Polly really thought about everything, asked her what bappened at church. And as grandmother and mother sat breathless to hear Polly say something pious. Polly answered sweetly: "It was awful funny, dranpa, they was two mans in white dresses there, and they just talked all the time." NANCY WYNNE.
