Through his attorney, Hallenbeck alleges that several months after the marriage his wife came to him and, after removing her wedding ring, exclaimed:

"I have no right to wear this, and I have no right to wear this, and I have no right to stay in your home."

According to Hallenbeck, his wife then made a "secret confession" to him. He asked that the marriage be aunulled on the ground of fraud, misrepresentation, stress and duress.

In a counter-suit for separation filed in New York, Mrs. Hallenbeck said she met her husband at the Adelphia Hotel is April, 1918, and that it was a case of love at first sight. Hallenbeck is vice president of a varnish manufacturing company.

OUR "AD" WEDNESDAY told you where The Henry Phipps Institute is located, what it is, why it was founded and why its treasury is empty. That was because your money is asked to prevent the Institute being closed on May 1. The request entitles you to full information about the Institute, which seeks, through scientific research by experts, to discover a method of prevention, or a cure, for tuberculosis.

You know of the wonders wrought in the industrial world by laboratory research. Similar wonders have been wrought in the medical world by laboratory research—the kind being done now at The Henry Phipps Institute.

Below are summaries of what research in one industry alone did to help Uncle Sam in war, and of what research has done to help medicine. The summaries will visualize for you what medical science is doing for life and health-perhaps yours, or that of your wife or your child.

Industrial Research Speeds Victory-Some of the General Electric Company's research activities during the war: Submarine detection devices. X-ray tube for medical service. Radio telephone and telegraph. Electric welding and applications. Searchlight for the Army and Navy. Electric furnaces for gun shrinkage. Magneto insulation for air service. Detonators for submarine mines. Incendiary and smoke bombs. Fixation of nitrogen. Substitutes for materials.

Medical Science Aids the Navy-The research facilities of medical laboratories are of world-wide importance as affecting health, both in war and in peace. When the Navy's medical department during the war was in urgent need of serological reagents, The Phipps Institute turned over its laboratory and staff to the Navy.

Saves Thousands-Medical research found the method of transmission of yellow fever and practically wiped out the disease that, theretofore, had killed thousands yearly. It took 40 years of laboratory work to find cause

Finds Typhoid Vaccine-It took years of laboratory research to learn the cause of typhoid fever. After the cause was found, it took 20 years more of laboratory research to perfect an efficient vaccine.

Helps Against Diphtheria-The diphtheria bacillus was found in 1884. In 1893, a diphtheria antitoxin was discovered. About 1915, a fairly efficient method of vaccination was devised which, it was hoped, would control the incidence of the disease. Medical research laboratories did all these Discovers Cause of Tuberculosis - The cause of tuberculosis was discovered in 1882. The cure has been sought since. Thus far, it has not been discovered. Scientists say that the cure will be found, ultimately, by medical research in a laboratory equipped for that purpose.

An Outpost of Health-In all the world there are but a scant half dozen laboratories built, equipped and manned to seek by scientific research for a method of prevention, or a cure for tuberculosis. The Henry Phipps Institute is one of this half dozen.

Will You Help?-The Phipps Institute needs and asks your money to keep open after May 1, when its treasury will be empty. Give what you can-$1 or $1000-it all will help humanity.

toward a $3,000,000 endowment fund, CONTINGENT upon the remainder being subscribed. When this gift will become available is, of course, problematical. The gift does not obviate the necessity for paying current expenses after May 1, when the Institute's treasury will be empty. $100,000 must be had to keep the Institute open until an endowment is obtained.
