

THE STREETS OF LIFE

By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Cherry Leaves for College

Anne Carter's childhood is shadowed by her mother's suicide. Pretty Alice Carter, Anne's mother, had never been happy and the last straw came when she was forced to look on while Anne received a whipping from her father for a childish bit of vanity.

heart dubbed it impossible. Cherry had piles of dirty linen handkerchiefs in her shining new trunk, monogrammed lovingly things, all very simple and very fine.

Cherry had a wonderful time showing Anne her new things. The simple blue traveling suit, the frilly waists, the trim shoes and satin evening slippers, the two new evening frocks, the hats, the snowy underwear—everything in fact that a girl would need who was going away from home for the first time.

"I'm to get my coat up there," Cherry explained. And then in a sudden rush of pity at the expression on Anne's face, she added, "Oh, Anne, I do wish you were going."

But she really didn't wish so. The friendship between the two girls had languished. Cherry had new excitements in her life; already she was beginning to feel superior to the girls who could not go away to college.

In a sense, however, Cherry was glad to be going away; she was getting a little tired of Anne and this would give her a chance to break off the friendship gradually.

Cherry's departure for boarding school almost broke Anne's heart. Anne stole over to the Harbings on the afternoon before Cherry was to leave.

BY THINKING the matter over Bill Snyder rather admired Anne for her attitude toward him.

Anne did not respond to pumping on the part of her father and aunt. When asked if she had a good time, she responded in monosyllables.

You might as well try to get water out of a stone as to get anything out of Anne," Aunt Martha remarked caustically, and the matter was dropped.

Cherry's departure for boarding school almost broke Anne's heart. Anne stole over to the Harbings on the afternoon before Cherry was to leave.

Cherry thought her for it, but in her ing returned soberly, and Cherry's conscience gave a twinge. She had forgotten the matter five minutes later though in an excited discussion about college, and it was in that manner that the two girls separated, for the friendship was never resumed in exactly the same way.

go up to her room, Jim Carter called her back. "What's the matter between you and Bill Snyder?" he asked in his surly way.

but the thought of it still made her writhe with shame. "What was it?" her father insisted.

WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S

Wanamaker's Down Stairs Store All Over the United States Men Are Looking to Lower-Priced Clothing

as one of the most important factors in their fight against higher costs. That's a platitude by now, but where to find this lower-priced clothing is the problem.

Even poor quality suits are masquerading around under higher prices, and it's somewhat like being set adrift in an uncharted sea for a man to start out today to buy a moderately priced suit of good quality.

That Is Why The Gallery Store for Men Stands Out Like a Beacon Light of Safety Where Any Man Can Make a Good Buy

An Importer Wanted to Close Out a Number of His Best Quality Straw Rugs

The sizes make an uneven lot which is one of the reasons why we were able to get the rugs at the low prices that we did.

But there are people in Philadelphia who need rugs of various sizes and there are plenty of the 9x12 rugs—the standard room size.

A Lot of Them—But They Won't Last Long!

9x12 feet, $9 8x10 feet, $7.50 54x90 inches, $3

Japanese straw rugs of this quality are commonly called grass rugs, but these are really of the best quality straw.

The double warp makes them especially durable and the rugs are bound all around.

But the Patterns

—are the big feature, next to the quality. Many of them are the all-over or the center-and-border designs that homekeepers like for living rooms and men like for offices.
