MOST representative number of dren's Hospital. And their things are women gathered at Mrs. Alexander splendid, too, van Rensselaer's home, 1801 Walnut street, yesterday afternoon to meet the Princess Cantacuzene, who, you know, was originally Miss Julia Grant, and is granddaughter of our late President S. Grant. The princess was altogether charming and gave a most in-teresting talk on conditions in Russia. explaining very carefully how the real Russians had striven all through the dark days to keep with the Allies and to kill bolshevism and were still ready do so with assistance. Mrs. George Lorimer, who is chairman of the incess Cantacuzene subcommittee of he Russian committee of the Emergency which in turn has Mrs. George Wharton Pepper as chairman, intro-duced the princess most gracefully and we were treated to a talk of more than an hour; a talk which was most clear.

DID you ever see such glorious hair count of the family being in mourning.

as Mrs. Bob Large has? I saw her a few days ago at an evening affair, and it was just as wonderful as when, at eighteen, she was one of the belles of her first season in society. She has been in mourning for some years for Mr. Large and has not been going about much. In fact, only this year large, and has at oners or theatre.

BETTY had had a party one day last week and the remains thereof consisted largely of four different kinds of candy. Well, on Sunday aunt and uncle went there to dine, and the candy was brought out. Every one was having a wonderful time and Betty's mother remarked once or twice: 'Really, I am afraid Betty will be sick with all that candy," and she spoke anxiously. But when Betty came in from play and examined each of her precious turn there was real feeling in her voice as she remarked, "I don't believe I'll get sick eating too much candy. NANCY WYNNE.
