Good News of Charming Fashions and Interesting Economies in Wanamaker's Down Stairs Store

Alice Carter, Anne's mother, was a pretty weak woman, too frail to bear the horrors of life. When Anne was seven her father, in a temper, was about to beat her with a strap one night for a childish bit of vanity when her mother, hardly knowing what she was doing, rushed out of the house and was found later in the river. The family moved to Greenville, a small town of Anne was brought up without any friends. At school she made friends with Cherry Harding, but their friendship had to be kept a secret. It wasn't until Anne's father brought home a stranger one night that Anne was ever permitted to know a man. Then she realized that her father wished her to be nice to Bill Snyder. Although she disliked the man, however, she went driving with him one evening, and he made love to her on a lonely country road. Anne's dislike immediately turned to hate.

ANNE did not answer and her father repeated. "What was it? Speak out, can't you? To think that a daughter of mine could be such a silent fool!" The injustice of her father's remark stung Anne to anger. She looked up and met her father's eyes levelly. There was no cringing in that look, no weakness. "What do you want me to say?" she asked, almost coldly.

He was surprised, taken back. "I want you to tell me why you treat Snyder the way you do. He's a fine chap; you couldn't do better than to marry him. He has a nice, tidy pile, and a good farm, and he's good-looking enough to please any woman."

"I don't want to marry him; I don't love him."

"What do you know about love?" her father asked contemptuously. "Love, the first thing you women prate of is love. Where does it get you? What does it amount to? I tell you, Bill Snyder is one of the best catches in town, and you're not going to make a fool of yourself for any foolish whim."

Anne was silent. Her eyes shone with indignation. "Have you got any spirit at all?" he growled out. "Didn't you inherit anything but your mother's weakness? I want to know why you don't like this man. What happened, did he try to kiss you?"

"Father," Anne's tone was unamused.

"So that's it. I was right. Well, suppose he did. Is that going to kill you? Most girls wouldn't object to a little love making. I suppose you want the wedding ring on your finger before you run away from me. Well, I want to tell you those squeamish ideas of yours aren't going to get you anywhere. You're eighteen and it's time you were married and had a home of your own. Now, I don't want to hear any more foolishness from you."

"Father, let me speak. I don't want to marry Bill Snyder for any man. Let me work it out; let me do something, anything. Let me get a job."

"No!" he shouted. "That's funny! A job? What could you do? Now, don't get any of that new woman stuff into your head. Your job is in the kitchen getting some man's meals. I tell you, I'll get this fine lady nonsense out of your head, or I'll kill you."

He rose and came over to Anne, and the menacing look in his eyes terrified her, so that she shrank away. The love of the bull in him was modified somewhat by the terror in the girl's eyes. As long as she was afraid of him, he could manage her, and that was what he wanted.

"I don't want to hear any more of this nonsense," he said. "And when Bill Snyder comes here I want him to be treated as a guest should be. He's my friend, and no girl of mine is going to insult him with any fine lady ideas. You'll go a long way before you find any one as good as he is who would look at you; let me tell you that."

That night, after Bill Snyder came to call, and from that time on he came to the Carters quite regularly. It seemed the thing for him to drop in on Sundays for an early supper and afterward Anne would be forced to sit in the ugly parlor while Mr. Snyder and her father talked farm gossip and Aunt Martha sewed. She knew always that sooner or later her father would get up and leave them and that Aunt Martha, after staying a while so that things wouldn't be too abrupt, would fold up her sewing with a deliberateness that was menacing, take off her glasses, and finally, after a perfunctory good-night, go upstairs. Anne could hear her moving around in the room overhead preparing to go to bed, and she would be forced to sit on and talk to Mr. Snyder until she felt she would go mad at the long silences that fell between them. They had nothing in common, not even the common ground of youth, for Anne was too reserved to talk about herself. Once, long ago, she had asked Cherry about the man who called on her.

"What do you have to talk about all evening?" she had asked curiously.

Cherry had looked at Anne out of the corner of her blue eyes and had said: "Oh, there's always something to talk about. And then it's always exciting not knowing what will happen next. And she had laughed consciously."

Anne knew now what Cherry had meant. She was always fearful of what Mr. Snyder might do next, fearful that he might repeat his actions of that memorable night, but so far he had made no attempt to touch her.

160 New Tricolette Dresses Special at $28.25 and $31.45

These are by far the loveliest tricolette dresses we have ever had to sell for anything like these small prices. The tricolette is of a fine, firm quality and the colorings are a delight—Wedgewood blue, creamy tan, white, navy blue and black. Others have white skirts and bodices of peach, orange, sky blue, rose or reindeer. Some are embroidered in silk, some in wool.

Cool Foulards and Taffetas

There seems no end to the delightful ways these summer frocks are made. There are many navy blues, lighter blues, blacks and tan shades and a number of the dresses are made with Georgette sleeves.

Foulards are $15, $17.50, $22.50 and $25.
Taffetas are $7.50, $12.50, $17.50, $22.50 and $25.

Dance Frocks, Special at $18.75

A little group of taffeta-and-tulle dresses and dresses of tulle or silk; in coral, pale pink, turquoise and maize. Sizes 14 to 18.

Serge and Tricotine Frocks, $13.25, $15, $17.50 and $20

Here are Eton dresses, some with pleated skirts, dresses embroidered with silk or tinsel and many with short or three-quarter sleeves. There are dozens of different models for your choosing and each is a splendid street dress and an excellent value.

Wool Jersey Dresses, $9 and $15

The 80 dresses are in navy and rookie and are embroidered about the bodices and collars.

The 15 dresses are in navy, tan, Copenhagen and taupe, embroidered in self-tones or silver tinsel.

Warm Weather Has Brought Out Fresh White Skirts—$3.50

The influence of pleats has made itself felt even in the new tub skirts—witness the skirt that is sketched. It is of white galatea, knife-pleated and topped with a strapped belt. It is in young women's lengths, 32 to 36, at $3.50.

Other charming new tub skirts are of cotton ramié at $1.90, of gabardine at $4.75 and cotton chambray at $5.75. An excellent model in extra sizes (32 to 38 inch waistbands) is of white gabardine at $7.50.

Delightful Pleated Wools at $15 and $16.50

A black and king's blue plaid is accordion pleated at $15.

At $16.50 there are many sorts of pretty skirts, box pleated, knife pleated or accordion pleated. Many are of plaids, though a smart skirt of navy serge has diagonal bands of colored silk stitchery.

Lowered Prices on Top Coats for Girls of 6 to 17 Years

In some styles sizes and colors are broken, so we have reduced the prices—many are now a third less than regular.

Group 1: $10, $11.25, $13.50 and $16.50

Included are tailored and sports coats of silk poplin, serge, polo cloth and tweed in various models. Sizes 6 to 12 years in the group.

Sports Suits for Juniors Special at $23.50, $27.50 and $29.50

They are of tweed with leather belts, of heather mixed jersey and of serge. Styles are particularly becoming to junior girls.

New Serge Capes for Juniors $16.50 and $23.50

The accordion-pleated capes have large collars of serge or cape collars of taffeta. The yokes are lined with striped silk.

Junior Tub Frocks $5, $5.50, $6.75, $7.50, $9 to $30

Gingham frocks in plain colors trimmed with pique; plaids, stripes and checks, some trimmed with piping, tiny ruffles, etc.; embroidered cotton crepe and beautiful organdies in pastel shades—such are the dresses.

Pretty tub frocks for smaller girls who wear sizes 6 to 11 years are $5, $4.50, $3—going gradually upward.

Dainty voiles in pastel shades, hand-embroidered dimities, dotted Swisses, organdies, etc., are in sizes 6 to 10 years at $4.50, $5.50 to $8.50.

Delightful Fancies in Dainty Vestings and Bandings

Net, lace and organdie in some of the prettiest styles are ready to lead a bit of freshness to Spring frocks and suits. Usually a quarter of a yard is enough for a vest.

The vestings are white or cream color, formed of row upon row of lace, net puffing or plain net; 12 to 21 inches wide and $2.25 to $5.75 a yard.

Tucked organdie vesting, in orchid, white, Copenhagen blue and maize, is $2 a yard.

Bandings to be used as collars, tiny sleeves and such are of pretty net and lace, 66c to $2.50 a yard.

Neck Pleatings

of net, Georgette crepe and organdie are 50c to $3 a yard. One style, of organdie, is scalloped and embroidered in white, rose, orchid or black; and one of net is edged with colored dotted Swiss.

New and Pretty Hats For Early Summer

$3.75, $5, $6 and $8

The smaller hats with transparent brims—many keeping flowers between haircloth—vie with the large, graceful hats. The tailored hats trimmed with smart ostrich and pleated ribbon seem to be running a race with the plain sailors. Each would be most attractive and so each does its best to make choosing the more interesting. A small hat with a loop of bright fuchsia red velvet across the top is quite new and different.

Fresh Tub Silk Blouses $5.75

A pretty semi-tailored style in white, with a roll collar fastening with a large pearl button, is just right for wearing with tailored sports suits.

$4.50, $4.75, $5

Sheer and lovely blouses with the most interesting Peter Pan or roll collars have few ruffles edging them, with ruffles also down the fronts and on the cuffs. These are of organdie in rose, violet, buttercup and French blue.
