

MODERN LOCHINVAR FAILURE AS ELOPER

Fourth Attempt of Black Horse Swain to Wed Pretty Rose Balked by Law

SAYS HE'LL TRY IT AGAIN

Like Lochinvar of old, but with his steed replaced by an automobile, Anthony Connel, of Black Horse, near Norristown, Pa., met the girl of his choice on the streets of Norristown yesterday, as she was on her way to work, and proposed that they go to Elktion, Md., and be married.

The girl, Rose Giannone, a sixteen-year-old daughter of Anthony Giannone, a well-to-do fireworks manufacturer, of Norristown, agreed, and they started for the Maryland Green. But the girl's parents objected to the elopement method when a search by Detective Harry Nuss developed that the missing Rose, in company with her modern Lochinvar, was last seen headed toward Elktion, and Magistrate Frank J. Clark was appealed to stop the marriage.

On the entreaties of Rose's father and mother, "Judge" Clark got in communication with the Elktion authorities, and requested that they hold the couple if they should put in an appearance. A warrant was authorized charging Connel with abduction.

Just before the marriage office closed in the afternoon Connel, who is nineteen years old, put in an appearance. He announced his name and purpose, and then followed a whispered conversation between the magistrate and the blushing Rose stood nearby.

At this point an Elktion detective appeared and displayed a warrant charging ing Connel with abduction. The surprised Lochinvar and his weeping maid were given lodging in the Elktion police station, while "Judge" Clark was informed by telephone.

Detective Nuss and Mrs. Giannone left immediately in an auto for Elktion, and late last night returned the travel-worn pair to their homes in Black Horse, a disappointed but not a disheartened pair.

It was the fourth attempt of the pair to be married, and they vowed they would try again at the first opportunity.

Magistrate Clark said today that although the girl's parents did not actually object to her lover's attentions, they disapproved of runaway marriages. The parents said today that the charge of abduction will not be pressed.
