

Dreamland Adventures

The Garden Dragons
By DADDY

(Peggy, Billy and Nanette, made happy by falling through the green glass, have adventures among the green glowing fairies. The fairies ask them to drive Dragon Cutworm away. They find the dragon worm away. They find the dragon worm and his family in a cave.)

CHAPTER VI
Robins and Dragons

MR. ROBIN was not the only bird to see Peggy, Billy and Nanette dancing on the bank above the cave of the dragon Cutworm and his family. Other dragons were also out looking for their robins. These robins followed Mr. Robin pell-mell when he went after the dancers.

Peggy, Billy and Nanette waited until the robins were almost down the bank and hid under a stone beside the door of the dragon's cave. Just as they expected, the robins came down to earth and began to look and listen, trying to find out where the dancing was going on.

Peggy thought the robins would hear the dragons in the cave and dig them out. She looked at Mr. Robin with a big grin after the angieworm. But in this Peggy was fooled. The dragons didn't hear. And so they didn't make a sound. And so they didn't make a sound. And so they didn't make a sound.

Billy saw what the trouble was. He was going to wake the dragons up. He was going to wake the dragons up. He was going to wake the dragons up.

There he saw the dragon asleep. He was going to wake the dragons up. He was going to wake the dragons up. He was going to wake the dragons up.

Old Dragon Cutworm himself saw Billy. He made a grab, but Billy gave him a quick whack over the nose with his stick and fled. Old Dragon Cutworm followed, and the other dragons were piling after him.

The robins up above heard the row with their sharp ears and were on the alert when Billy came tumbling out of the cave. Mr. Robin made a quick snatch at Billy, but before his beak closed, old Dragon Cutworm came jumping out, and quick as a wink Mr. Robin nabbed him instead of Billy.

The other robins saw the other dragon and in a trice they grabbed 'em and huddled 'em up. There was a dragon for every robin, just enough to go around.

Peggy, Billy and Nanette were watching the feast when suddenly they heard a voice right over their heads. It was Mr. Robin who had eaten old Dragon Cutworm in a hurry. He was looking down at the children with his bright, snappy eyes.

"Why, R. in Princess Peggy, Prince Billy and Nanette, all of them as tiny as mice," chirped Mr. Robin. "We heard that you had been lost. You'd better be getting home in a hurry."

Why that Mr. Robin picked up Peggy, a second robin picked up Billy, and a third robin picked up Nanette, and away they flew for the children's home.

As they sped through the air Peggy felt herself growing back to her own size. Quickly she became as large as Mr. Robin himself, and in another second she was so big that he had to drop her. Down, down, she fell in a confused whirl, landing at last safe and sound right in her own bed and back to her usual size.

"Time to get up!" her mother was calling to her. "Time to get up!" echoed Peggy. "Time to get up and plant my own garden. My, I'm glad those robins nibbled the dragon cutworm for me. Nanette's green fairies and my own green fairies will be safe to grow as they usually do."

A fairy tale presented by the department of swimmers, entitled "The Princess Who Never Smiled."

Girls made up to represent well-known figures in national advertising.

A pageant called the "Dance of the Seasons," in which little girls take the parts of flowers.

A play given by the Loyalty Club, one of the business women's clubs, entitled "One Out of the Kitchen, Mary Ann."

A Hindu temple, represented by the Self-Help Club.

A three-act play, "A Perplexing Situation," given by the Common Weal Club.

Living book models presented by the Educational Club.

And as added features, a bootblack parade by the Germantown High School girls; a Japanese tea garden; a toy orchestra and May-pole dance.

WEDDING ROMANCE'S CLIMAX

Former War Nurse to Marry Man She Met in Hospital

Miss Mary H. Barkham, 928 Hudson street, Gloucester City, who was an army nurse stationed at the Cape May hospital during the war, will be married today to Leslie Floyd, who was connected with the medical corps at the same hospital, and then will end a romance that started at the hospital.

The nurse came into contact with Floyd in the line of her duties and they became friends and eventually their friendship ripened into love and then an engagement, and today the marriage. The ceremony will be performed at St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, Camden, at noon. The bride, after the hospital closed, became a nurse at the Cooper Hospital, Camden, and a few weeks ago became a visiting nurse. The bridesmaid today will be her sister, Mrs. Jane Rhoades, while the best man will be Frank W. Rhoades.

GOVERNOR TO PRESIDE

Will Unveil Tablet for Church Members Who Lost Lives in War

Governor Spruell will speak at the dedication exercises tomorrow afternoon at the old First United Presbyterian Church, Fifty-second street and Chester avenue, when a memorial tablet bearing the names of ninety-four men and one woman, members of that church who served in the war, will be unveiled. For the Post, of the American Legion, will attend in a body and army and navy officers will take part in the ceremony. State Representative James A. Walker will also speak.
