

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

BALDY SAM'S MAY PARTY

Baldy Sam and Judge Owl give a May party for Nanette and four of her friends from the city. Peggy, the birds and the animals are invited. Nanette is the Queen of the party, and the other children do not know her until she tells them who she is.

CHAPTER V

The Feast in the Glade. LITTLE JOE was the smallest of the children from the city. He was very happy having fun with the birds and animals, and very proud wearing his crown as the King of May. But still there was one thing bothering Little Joe—he was hungry.

That wasn't a bit strange, for small boys are almost always hungry, particularly when they are city little boys. Little Joe stood the gnawing ache inside of him just as long as he could, then he crept up close to Nanette's throne.

"Have you a cookie, or a cracker, Nanette?" he asked softly. Nanette didn't have a cookie or a cracker and she sadly shook her head. "Don't they always have cookies or something to eat at parties?" whispered Little Joe.

"Sh-sh-sh!" said Nanette, for she didn't want Baldy Sam or Judge Owl to hear. They were giving the party, and Nanette was afraid they had found out all about things to eat. They might feel bad if they found out that they had overlooked the most important part of the party.

But Baldy Sam's big ears had heard Little Joe's whisper. "Hoo-haw, are you hungry?" he asked. "I'm all hollow inside," whispered Little Joe. "Hoo-haw!" laughed Baldy Sam. Then he sent his voice roaring through the woods in a mighty bray.

"Hoo-haw! Hoo-haw!" he brayed. Baldy Sam and Judge Owl started to follow. Soon there arose in the woods a loud uproar—howls, growls, booms, brays, hisses and screams. It came from the direction in which the animals had gone. There was more noise than if a mouse had broken loose in a roomful of girls.

This uproar kept up for several minutes, and then Baldy Sam's hoarse bray could be heard. "Hoo-haw! Hoo-haw! Come on! Lunch is ready!"

The children and birds waited for no more. They rushed toward Baldy Sam, coming soon to a bright, sunny glade. What they saw in that glade made them shout with joy.

A picnic feast was spread upon the ground—cake, pie, sandwiches, cookies, pickles; nut meats, hard-boiled eggs, lemonade, and a whole lot of other good things. At one side was an ice-cream freezer, just heaped up with ice-cream.

"Hello, Lonesome Bear!" they said, for it was their old friend. "Dinner is ready!" sniffed Lonesome Bear, rolling his eyes in a grin at Peggy and Billy. "All we have to do is drive what did he mean by 'Drive the catera away'?" Perhaps the catera were flies or ants, thought Peggy.

But Baldy Sam, Billy Goat, Johnny Bull and Judge Owl seemed to know what Lonesome Bear meant, for they raced off into the woods after him.

Here was food enough for 100 hungry children. "Hoo-haw! Pitch right in!" brayed Baldy Sam, and pitch in they did. In tomorrow's chapter the feasters get a surprise of a different sort.

There is Economy in Buying Coffee Packed in Tins. Look at a can of Morning Sip Coffee and then at a package of bag-packed coffee to realize why it is economical to buy Morning Sip. Bag-packed coffee loses much of its aroma and strength because the package is not air-tight. Morning Sip Coffee is packed in tightly sealed tins that keep all the strength and aroma in the coffee. That is why Morning Sip Coffee makes better coffee with half the quantity you ordinarily use.

Morning Sip sells rapidly and your grocer's stock is continually being replenished with tins fresh from the roasters. Try Morning Sip—and use only half the usual quantity to a cup. Everybody in the family will vote their Morning Sip a regular cup of coffee.
