

MAGISTRATES' ROW BREAKS UP HEARING

Bored Prisoner Tires of Political Argument on Bench and Walks Out

IS ELECTION AFTERMATH

A bored and weary prisoner was arbiter in a windy political battle between Magistrate Price and Pennock at the Sixty-first and Thompson streets station this morning, and ended it finally by exclaiming in disgust: "Hay, youse guys, for the love of Mike, cut it out. I ain't here to listen to no political bull. Where do I get off? What's the sentence?" And then it started all over again. "Fifteen hundred dollars bail for court," snapped Magistrate Price. "Nothing of the sort," snapped back Magistrate Pennock. "I've made out a release for the prisoner. Young man, you're free."

They argued some more—and the prisoner, preferring Magistrate Pennock's verdict, blissfully went his way.

Is Interesting Interlude
It was a merry interlude for the station house crew and the small but select gathering of minor offenders and interested spectators.

Magistrate Pennock presides at Sixty-first and Thompson streets. The prisoner, Bryce Clark, Arch street above Fifty-sixth, was arrested election day and charged with intoxication.

Magistrate Price had the prisoner for a further hearing today, and after hearing testimony this morning, had made additional charges against him of obstructing an election, intimidating voters and carrying a gun.

"Fifteen hundred for court," said Magistrate Price.

"Have your client write a hearing," Magistrate Pennock counseled the attorney representing Clark.

"He'll not waive a hearing," said Magistrate Price.

"He will," said Pennock.

The argument swiftly developed a political tone, and finally the two magistrates offered to bet each other on their political chances.

WOMEN PICKETS FREED

Two Carried Irish Freedom Propaganda Banners
Two young women, who, according to the police, carried banners bearing anti-British announcements, were arrested last night at the Metropolitan Opera House, where the anniversary of Queen Victoria's birthday was being celebrated by the United British Societies of Philadelphia.

The women, who gave their names as Theresa Pont, of Merion, and Mary Malvin, of Dickinson and Taylor streets, were parading the sidewalk when arrested, the police say.

One of the banners carried by the women bore the following: "Americans, did you send your dollars to enable the British to plunder Irish homes and murder Irishmen?" The prisoners were taken to the Twentieth and Buttonwood streets police station and charged with breach of the peace, but were released this morning by Magistrate Carney.

COLGATE AFTER MILLION

Series of Nation-Wide Dinners Are Planned in University Drive
Hamilton, N. Y., May 26.—Famous athletes, students who lead their classes, "prom" committeemen, fraternity leaders and editors of college publications will become orators for the night on June 1 when Colgate University's 2300 alumni get together in their home towns for a nation-wide series of "3333" dinners with which the Colgate Alumni Corporation campaign, June 1 to 12, for a $1,000,000 endowment and a new gymnasium will be opened.

A student speaker for each gathering is the motto which George W. Cobb, of New York, national chairman, has adopted in planning for the dinners to which undergraduates will present their views of Colgate's present needs and opportunities to serve the nation and its incoming generations.

One of the purposes of the Colgate endowment fund is to increase professors' salaries materially.

Arrangements are making for the dinner of the Colgate alumni in Philadelphia under the direction of J. Ambler Williams, chairman of the local committee in charge of the endowment drive.

PATROL DRIVER HURT

Policeman Tries to Stop Runaway Motorcycle in Station Yard
Patrol Driver Harry Seese, of the Nineteenth and Oxford streets police station, was badly hurt in a peculiar accident caused by a runaway motorcycle in the station yard late last night.

Seese noticed a motorcycle belonging to the squad of the Twenty-third district standing in the center of the yard. He started to move it into the garage, not realizing that the machine was in gear. It shot away from him and began running wild about the yard.

Seese tried several times to stop it, fearing that it would be damaged, and finally managed to spring into the seat. Before he could get control of the machine, however, it ran head on into the building, throwing him over the handlebars. The machine was badly damaged.

Seese was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he was found to have received cuts and lacerations of the head, face, body and hands.

Lumber valued at several thousand dollars was destroyed in a fire which swept a storage house of Mauran Dolman & Co., at Dorsett and Chestnut streets, Germantown, last night.

The flames illuminated the neighborhood for several blocks.

As the storage house stands alone on a large lot, the firemen had little trouble in extinguishing the flames.
