BIOGRAPHY OF A GREAT AMERICAN—SOME NEW FICTION

HERBERT HOOVER'S BIG ENTERPRISES Novels Grave and Gay to Suit

When the War Broke Out He and His Association Were Employing 175,000 Men-A Mine Owner as Well as an Engineer

When it is said that Herbert Hoover is a successful mining engineer who has had charge of large operations outside of the United States and that he was in charge of the relief of Belgium, most of us have exhausted our knowledge of the details of the life of one of the most conspicuous men in the world today.

He ight years old, he went to London as the junior partner in the firm that had employed him in Australia. It once more sent him to that country. After accomplishing his work there in seven the became managing director or chief consulting engineer of a score of mining companies.
