Nancy Wynne Tells of Handsome Clothes—She Talks About Miss Thayer's Scenario to Be Acted for the Junior League—She Attends Fete at Abington

HAVE you seen the perfectly stunning hat that Mrs. George W. Childs Drexel is wearing? It is of very dark blue, fine chip straw, has rather a stiff brim, in sailor shape and is covered with a long semicurled white ostrich feather. She was wearing this hat the other afternoon with a white silk suit and the whole costume was most effective.

WHAT do you think about the movies that Peggy Thayer and Jack Potter and Harry Coxe are in? You know Molly Thayer, who is quite some little writer, has composed a scenario, and it's to be given in the fall under the auspices of the Junior League. The League has not had a performance since our entry into the recent great war, if my memory serves me right, and so a movie with League members and gay bachelors of the social world therein will take decidedly I should say.

Peggy Thayer, who is a distant cousin of Molly's, is to be the heroine and Jack Potter the hero. Jack has been quite some hero any way since the Prince of Wales made him quite a friend, and he's a most attractive looking somebody, believe I. He's the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Potter and has been one of the bachelor beaux of the parties for many a year.

There's a heavy villain in the plot I understand, none other than Bayard Bowie; and Betty Trotter is the maid while Harry Coxe is the butler. Eleanor Davis, Margaret Pallett, a sort of "vamp"; Alfred Hunter, Teddy Browning, Dan Dougherty, Warren Downs, Margaret Remak, Teddy Baird and several others are among the other actors. Gainor Baird is director and the pictures are being reeled at the George Woodward place, in Chestnut Hill, at Betzwood and in various other parts of the suburbs, where the backgrounds are ideal and the houses beautiful.

SOMEHOW I think it will be very interesting. Do you remember the movie gotten up about six years ago for the Charlotte Cushman Club when the Griscom place in Haverford was the background and Alberta Brinton was the villainess and Cesare Sturani and Reggy Oates the "villains"? That was good, though the girls in that were not as young as these, so this should be even more attractive. You remember Alberta Brinton married Sturani a couple of years after the giving of that movie, and Vinton Freedley, who was the doctor, has gone on the legitimate stage since then. I wonder if any romances will spring from this movie, and if any embryo actors or actresses will bud forth. It will be interesting to watch in more ways than one.

THE "Once in a Blue Moon" party was beautiful yesterday out at the Huntingdon Valley Country Club. It was for the Abington Hospital, you know, and, judging from the crowds and the lovely things for sale, I should say they took in quite a lot. The babies were too darling! They were all in a wee tent and the grown-ups would insist on standing round and looking in at them, and it was hot for them and they didn't see Mother, and altogether, you know, they wouldn't quite like it, so a few tears were shed, but not very many, and when Mrs. Sam Woodward sang to them they were quite enchanted, though many were too young to understany the 'tory, which was delightfully told.

The dresses which various women were wearing during the afternoon were just as pretty as could be. Mrs. Robert Sewell wore a dark blue swiss frock called the economy dress, and a rough straw hat trimmed with a blue scarf. Some one told me that the whole costume cost within ten dollars. All I can say is, lead me to the store where said dress was purchased for I want one just like it.

Later in the afternoon Mrs. Sewell donned a pearl grey frock which was one of the most fetching I had seen for many a day, but, that of course was not so cheap. Burford Lorimer had a dancing bear in tow, who was none other than Roose Wallace dressed up as a bear and he carried a cup in his paw, into which you put five, ten or in fact, any amount you felt inspired to give. The bear immediately danced for you, and if you had seen how long he danced for a quarter you would have been sorry for him, because the heat was rather intense, I should say, under that plush bear's garment.

The baby clothes which Mrs. Curtis had for sale were too sweet for anything, dainty little dresses and wee sacks and bonnets and the cutest little pink and blue hangers. Mrs. Green who was painting portraits had so many appointments she couldn't even stop to eat. Mrs. George Lorimer who was chairman of the affair looked very smart in a white crepe de chine frock embroidered in dark blue and a dark blue hat trimmed with lilies of the valley. Mrs. John Newbold wore a lovely lingerie gown of embroider and irish lace, and a large pink satin hat. Mary Brown Warburton looked very sweet in a white frock and a large leghorn hat, and Pansy Scott was a picture, in a blue voile frock and a large blue rough straw hat trimmed with field flowers.

Mrs. Wharton Sinkler who was selling shares on an automobile looked very sweet in a linen colored frock and sports hat of the same shade.

MARY had been to Sunday school and came home with a very serious expression on her small face. She had evidently thought deeply on all she had heard. "Well, darling," said mother, "What was the lesson today? Did you study any text?" "Yeth Muver, an' it wath hard to get the words at first, but I got 'em." "Tell it to mother, dear," said the interested parent, and Mary said: "A voice wath heard in Rammer, weeping and mo'ning, Rachel whaling her children, who would not comfitted."
