Nancy Wynne Tells of the Accident to Miss Newbold's Party in the Park Saturday-She Anticipates Going to See "The Mikado" Tonight.

THAT certainly seemed a miraculous I escape on Saturday night for Dickie Seemed and her party! They were Newbold and her party! They were Newbold and her party! They were Seemed to and Steve Colhoun, who is engaged to and Arthur Hickman's cheek was a front; Arthur Hick way, for, when I saw him yesterday, he had a fine-sized welt on his head. Otherwise no serious injuries developed. Wasn't it wonderful they were not killed, for that car was one thoroughly

HAVE another reason for being glad

HAVE another reason for being glad the war is over. War is over, good night! Why it's nearly two years since the armistice. Be that as it may, you know no one felt that it was quite over this time last year, because the troops had not returned and 30 the regular manual doings had not started up again. But tonight, ladies and gentlemen, we will have the pleasure of seeing the Savoy Onera Company, with Elsie Brinton, Marion Taylor, Elizabeth Latta and all of them, in that epitome of Gilbert and Sullivan, the "Mikado." And me, I love it almost as much as "Alice is Wenderland." When I was five I could toddle and zip my fan and giggle just like the three little maids, and when I was fifteen my joy in life was to stand in the living room and sing "The Moon and I" for the benefit of a leng-suffering but heroic family, all of whom but the accompanist fled to the upper floors of the house." I have laughed at Koko and his "lit-de list" and the Mikado and his "object ill sublime" at no less than eighteen mances in my lifetime, and I am performances in my lifetime, and I am still looking eagerly forward to the opening of the Savoy Opera Company tonight, when I may again go through the serrows of Tom Tit and weep with him. It was a great thing when Major Allen started that company, and long may it continue! It will be another hing to keep his memory green in our earts. He was killed, you remember,

It was some twenty years ago that he stided to start an opera company of mateurs with real talent to present s of the operas at the end of each theire season for some charity and thus tep the public interested in good music nd rare comedy. And until the war Savoy gave a performance every he little operetta "Trial by Jury" for he boys in the service and then susended performances. And tonight bey start once more on their merry way with Joseph Craig Fox directing the setting and A. Gordon Mitchell in harge of the music.

HAVE you ever seen such splendid days as we have had for the outf-doors parties? It was simply perhet out at the Gearys' place in Chest-nat Hill yesterday. You know the Smart women generally are discussing the permanent wave these days. The idea is especially attractive for summer and for the shore in particular, where naturally straight hair will not retain the wave from curlers or iron. The permanent wave becomes more emphatic with moisture, just as does hair that is naturally curly. Denney & Denney, at 1513 Walnut street, were among the last to set the seal of their professional approval upon the permanent wave—they waited for a scientific method to be evolved which should be harmless and satisfactory. This desired method is the one that they are using at the present time, and they are now filling their books with pre-vacation appointments. The permanent wave is repeated about every six months, owing to the growth of the hair, and the cost ranges from $18 to $40, depending upon the amount of hair waved. After the process, by moistening the hair and inserting combs you will be able to make a beautiful water wave in the hair, any length you desire. Why not drop into this highly reputable establishment and have a chat about it, at least?

Sterling's, at 1210 Walnut street, are celebrating their fifth anniversary, that is, fifth anniversary for their highly satisfactory ready-made department. The famous custom-tailoring department has been in existence for fifteen years. Because of this anniversary prices are marked particularly close, and there is a 20% discount prevailing upon all merchandise, even splendid polo coats (there are four styles), which are of real camel's hair (a much more durable and finer material than polo cloth), which Sterling's have been selling at the interesting price of $59.50. That is the present tag price of them, but, of course, the 20% discount makes them even more inviting. It is remarkable what a reputation for pleasing and high quality this highly satisfactory shop of Sterling's has achieved, and their con-stantly increasing clientele, consisting of patrons who return again and again to all their departments, is an emphatic proof of their worth. I tell you about the anniversary because you may want to take advantage of the particularly close pricing just at this time.

It is such a joy to stop and gaze into the window of the shop occupied by Chertak-Wenger, at 1229 Walnut street. Such stunning hats, such unusual and luxurious furs! I was particularly delighted with a formal tam-o'-shanter (there really is such a thing) of brown maline. It is mounted upon rather a deep stiffened band which fits the head closely, and then the edges of the tam itself have a two-inch inset of the maline vertically tucked. The tam is drawn to one side upon its mounting, and upon the top, arranged to sweep diagonally over the shoulder, is a magnificent snray of golden Paradise. It is quite unlined, so that the hair can gleam alluringly through it. It is an adorable bit of millinery. Upon the second floor of this exclusive shop are displayed those marvelous Wenger furs. Just now there is a wonderful ensemble of filmy, fur-trimmed garments for summer, but at the same time Mr. Wenger is taking orders at a considerable saving for the furs of next fall

The Devon Horse Show put a very strong emphasis upon costumes composed of sweaters and skirts, and this is a most excellent forecast for the summer season from now on. Sweaters have become staple garments, just as have blouses, and each season ushers them in in more delightful novelty and charm. A sartorial feast for the eves is an unusual ensemble of sweaters to be seen at "The Paris Shop of America." J. M. Gidding, located in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, at Broad and Walnut Streets. Quite different are these sweaters from any such garments that I have seen. There is a jester model, half black and half white, which is most effective. It is a fine silk machine-knit weave, entirely white upon the left side and entirely black upon the right. It crosses diagonally at the front, but there is a straight dividing line down the center back. It is helted with a braided tasseled cord of black. "Stunning" is the only suitable adjective of which I can think. The three-quarter sleeves and bottom of the sweater are fringed in black silk. Gidding's have a wonderful assortment of silk sports skirts to accompany these sweaters. I was delighted with the possibilities of sports costumes glimpsed there, through the combination of the two.

There hasn't been a smarter fur piece in several seasons than the little skins of marten and sable which women are now wearing. One has to guard against inferior skins, however, and the best precaution is to get them at a reliable house. Siefert's, at 1426 Walnut street. have genuine Russian sable in one and two skin neck-pieces, the former costing $200 up and the latter $450 up. The skins are an excellent color and texture. Then there are Hudson Bay skins, also made up, priced at $110 and $375 up depending whether they are single or double. Natural baum, or tree, marten, which comes very close to the appearance of Russian sable, is priced at $100 and $200 up for single and double skin neckpieces. You will perhaps like to look at them while you are in town.
