There never were so many old clothes worn in Philadelphia. It became a craze, an obsession. There was good enough reason for it—prices had been driven inordinately high—but this sale removes the last excuse. The campaign has been worth while—the public has won!
A large and capable selling force will be on hand—and in every way the clothing will be sold and handled with unusual Gimbel carefulness.
Mere sleeve or trouser shortening free. Few will require it, as there is a very complete scale of sizes.
We reserve the right to complete deliveries in two to four days—no usual organization could handle such a business more quickly.
We Invite Manufacturers to confer with us on the marketing of considerable lots of various goods—of Gimbel Standard—in this strong but conservative move to re-adjust prices to the great public's advantage and the permanent help of business. —Gimbels, Second floor
