THE VARDON-BRAID-TAYLOR TRIO GETTING NERVOUS ON EVE OF PLAY FOR THE BRITISH OPEN GOLF TITLE

THE sands of time are slipping rapidly for the three most famous, probably, golfers in the world. It seems like a hysterical flight of the imagination to have for a minute that the three British winners of sixteen open championships and a score or more of minor titles should be at all nervous about qualifying for the coming open championship of Great Britain.

It does not seem possible that such an idolized king of the links as Harry Vardon, present British open champion and six times holder of the honor, or James Braid, first to win the great title five times, or John Henry Taylor, five times winner and twice tied for the honor, will be affected by the pros and cons of every great golfing clinic yet of next week. But on the eve of the struggle for places such is actually the case.

The press abroad is becoming bolder and bolder, where a few years ago it would have been nothing short of heresy to breathe that the almost defined "triumvirate" would fall to pieces.

Confidence plays an important part in the game. Without it the few slips, just enough to keep them at the going. Then there is the reflection of the confidence of the gallery. Even a star used to success particularly senses in his inmost mind while he is making the shots the fact of a gallery doubting his ability to come through. He becomes imbued with that desire to "show them."

Comes a slip, and the star wonders whether the gallery is right. You can't play the gallery and your own game.

Then there is the attitude of the press and the critics and the respect shown to one's game by the other pros. With all these factors adverse, the play of the game becomes a little less interesting, a little more bothersome, a little more conducive to failure than success.

WHAT effect is all this going to have on the play of Vardon, Braid and Taylor next week? They have failed once to qualify in a big open this year. They know. Duncanson, Abe Mitchell, George Duncan and others, are not only pushing them hard in popular favor, but actually outstripping them. Vardon, Braid and Taylor have already been laid tenderly on the shelf in the minds of many of those who used to worship so fervently at their shrine.

Their Golf and Years Are Reasons

THERE are two main reasons, physical reasons, why the "triumvirate" has slipped in public favor. It is true that Vardon averaged just over 77 for the last year and that Braid and Taylor were just a fraction more per round.

But it is also true that in the News of the World tourney qualifying round this season, the biggest open next to the championship, all three of these honor-laden golfers failed to qualify. It was a failure that worked both ways.

It lessened the confidence of the three in themselves. It lessened the confidence of their followers. The "triumvirate" now stands with its back to the wall. They know their wartime lay-off from thrilling contests of the links, as of old, has subtracted from their playing powers.

Can it be that the heavy hand of Time has been laid upon them? Vardon, they say, is "stabbing" his putts in the throes of another "greens malady." The eyes of Braid are becoming less strong and more worrisome.

Taylor, the spokesman for the trio, who proclaims with vigor that although they are over the half-century mark in years they still possess the getting power as of yore, finds that he is a bit more self-conscious, that he is forever trying too hard, that it is as easy for the best of them when a bit nervous to miss with frequency as for those reckoned strokes worse, and that his game is under the constant scrutiny of critics who, while sympathetic, at the same time profess to see signs of weakness fundamental.

THROUGH the length and breadth of Great Britain they are saying the praise of Abe Mitchell, the "longest driver in the world," he of the "per-

MUD FLATS WORRY SCHUYLKILL CREWS

"Navy" Regatta, to Be Held Next Saturday, Has Thirty-six Entries

The next big event on the Schuylkill river will be the Schuylkill Navy regatta on Saturday afternoon and the same old water, as nature had it, will be the scene of the regatta of the American Navy's regatta on the same day.

The low water in the river and the mud flats in front of Boathouse Row formed the theme of discussion yesterday among Joe Wright, coach of the University of Pennsylvania crews; former Commodore Samuel H. Melloy, and Vice Commodore Samuel H. Trautman of the "navy." Mr. Melloy said $25,000 had been appropriated by Council last year for the purpose of dredging in front of the boathouses and that $10,000 had been expended in deepening the canal below Columbia avenue bridge. During the last two weeks some work was done in front of Boathouse Row, but according to reports the mud was situated in a quarter mile of the river. Coach Wright said he saw many boats struck in the one spot last Saturday.

Nearly half of the slips of the regatta are high and dry, and the crews are compelled to call off their dogs regularly last Saturday, and Matta has postponed its races. The Matta Club will use the College Boat Club beginning tomorrow when the Penn crew discusses Lake Cayuga for the inter-collegiate races.

The Schuylkill Navy regatta will be held over the mile course, starting about a quarter mile below the trolley bridge and finishing at Columbia bridge. Twelve races are on the schedule, with thirty-six entries, as follows: Junior single shells, five; junior double shells, five; junior four-oared gigs, five; junior centipedes, five; novel single gigs, three; intermediate single shells, three; senior four-oared gigs, three; senior quarter-mile dash, one; senior centipedes, one; senior double shells, one.

Yester will lead the entry list. Jack Kelly will row in the senior quarter-mile dash, but there are no indications of any entries from other clubs. Hanna will row in junior single shells, Fin and Felton will row in junior double shells, and the junior centipede will be Hanna, Boyd, Flynn and Felton, stroke. Auer, Gutgesell, Costello and Kelly will row in the senior centipede, and the senior four will be Auer, Boyd, Gutgesell, Boyd and Lally, stroke. The junior eight crew consists of Nelson, bow; Rabbit, 2; Schwab, 3; Barton, 4; McConnell, 5; Wood, 6; J. Costello, 7; Hill, stroke; Ewing, coxswain. Nelson, Rabbit, J. Costello, and Hill, with Ewing as coxswain, will make up the four-oared gig. Costello and Kelly are ready to row in senior doubles, but there is no other entry for this even now for the senior centipede, or quarter-mile dash, and if entries from other clubs are not received it will be necessary to scratch these races. The entries will close tonight with Vice Commodore Trautman, and R. Brettinger in junior novice singles. Wellington will row in junior single shells, and R. Brettinger in junior novice singles. Well-

fect irons and putts." Harry Vardon, the king, is dead. Long live the king, Abe Mitchell! This is the popular trend.

Is There a New "Triumvirate"?

SO, TOO, has the awakening of George Duncan swept the links. No longer, we are told, is there a distinct cleavage between the "triumvirate" and the next in order, Ray, Duncan and Mitchell.

For indeed it seems the "triumvirate" is no more. Now we find these three fighting back like lions at bay, surrounded and surrounded you might say, by the pack that would take their lives. It matters little to the veteran "triumvirate" which one of its members wins. But win one of them must.

Says the mighty Taylor:

"We have three chances to the one of an aspirant to the title. Never have we been pushed as appears likely an exhibition of battling against the opinions of the press, the beliefs of the pros and the sympathy which we do not need or crave. Hold back any condolences until the seventy-two holes are over. Many the time the young players have shone in preliminaries and lost when it came to the real rub, the nerve-racking putt, the tricky masher pitch, the placing of the drive against a hard-blowing wind, an iron shot with the needed fadeaway. Braid chinked from a caddy, he making the earth tremble. This is brave talk and it's good to hear. Such as these three do not boast. It is heartening to their thousands of followers. The solid throngs will go out again behind 'our Harry' to marvel at his immitable style. They will pack behind the deadly masher work of Taylor as of yore. Every Scot in fifty miles will be out there behind Jamie Braid; 'aye, mon, he hits them bonnie long 'n' sweet."

BUT one fact persists. It is the stand of the "triumvirate," the glory glow of yore. And a felle scowl of golf fans is dubious.

Eddie McNichol Valuable Coach

LON JOURDET has stepped down as coach of the championship Penn basketball five, and thereby the University lost one of the most successful tutors in the history of sports at the institution. In the short time he has been coach, Jourdet brought more championships to the Red and Blue than any other instructor with the possible exception of Douglas Stewart, the soccer mentor. The University Athletic Council named Edward J. McNichol as Jourdet's successor, and no better man could be secured. The son of the late senator has been raised with a basketball in his hands, and what he doesn't know about the game could be written on the point of a pin or something like that. For three years he coached the Red and Blue, and during two seasons, 1915-16 and 1916-17, he captained the Penn five. It was in 1916 that the Quakers landed the inter-collegiate title by defeating the Tigers in the post-season play-off.

Eddie is a keen student of the game and, like Jourdet, possesses one of those rare personalities that inspires others to give their all. Last season he coached the freshman five, which lost only one game during the entire season, and assisted Jourdet in the coaching of the varsity.

Jourdet suggested McNichol when he tendered his resignation. At that time he stated that Eddie was one of the most capable coaches in the country and that the winning of the American collegiate title by Penn was due in a large measure to the tutoring of the 1921 coach. Eddie is a brother of Danny McNichol, the 1921 captain. Between the two of them the McNichols should carry Penn to another basketball crown.

JOURDET left his coaching post so that he could give more time to his business. He has held the tutoring job since 1914, and during his reign Penn won three inter-collegiate titles, one American championship and finished first in the league when the brown team was not at stake on account of the war.

MILNER WILL PLAY WITH SINOCO NINE

Captain of Navy Team Here Before Reporting for Duty as Ensign

Edward Milner, former Southern High School baseball player and who was captain of the strong team which won the inter-service championship for the United States Naval Academy this year, is visiting his family in this city, following his graduation at Annapolis a few days ago.

Milner is considered by the Middies to be the best captain at that academy in the ranks of ensigns. He now holds the rank of ensign.

Following a short visit here, Milner will take up his naval duties, probably on the battleship USS Oregon.

White House Milner will play with his former mates of high school days, who are with the Sun Oil Co. team, managed by Wm. Swallow, a star crewer a few years ago at the downtown high school.

Low Martin, who was a student at South Philly, also is with the Sunoco team, managed by Wm. Swallow.

Jimmy Landberg, of Northeast High, is in the Sunoco infield.

Manager Swallow is located in the Pinnac Building.

Bob Martin Stops a "Bimbo" Charleston, W. Va., June 14.—Bob Martin, a former champion pugilist of the world, has been elected to the position of manager of the Philadelphia club in the first round of the fight between him and a ten-ton pugilist.

George Colanabatto, the Italian champion, rode a sensational race and finished in a time which broke the track record of forty-four miles and two laps and he not suffered from punctures during the last ten minutes of the race. Paced by Norman Anderson, he took second place, five laps behind Chapman.

Percy Lawrence, paced by Jimmie Hunter and later by Speedy Vandenberg, was third, one lap ahead of Morris Bodell, who was paced by Johnny Schlee.

Speedy Vandenberg copped the three-mile final of the race for pacemakers. He trained Norman Anderson by at least three lengths in the three miles. He was clocked in three minutes 47 seconds.

During the race, it was announced that Clarence "Arman" the world champion, would ride at the drome next Thursday night in the forty-mile Olympic derby. He will be opposed by Collins, Chapman and Colanabatto.

JOE TIPLITZ GETS CHANCE TO MAKE HISTORY REPEAT

He Knocked Out Chaney After Tendler Did, and Will Attempt the Same Against Papin

IS IN GOOD CONDITION

By LOUIS H. JAFFE

ON JUNE 4, 1919, fistie dope was given a knockout blow when Lew Tendler surprised a big crowd at Shibe Park by stowing away George Chaney, the Baltimore southpaw and knocker-out. While Tendler's hitting powers had been a well known fact at that time, there were few fans who believed Lew could sock Chaney into unconsciousness for the necessary ten seconds for a K. O.

Ten days later Chaney again was locked in the arms of Morphous, or somebody like that, and this time the dope was knocked higher than ever in Philadelphia's fistie history, because Joe Tiplitz was the young gent who administered the haymaker. Tendler scored his kayo in the first round, while "Tip" unworked his knockout wallop in the third.

That even the "know-bos" were knocked dizzy that Chaney when Tiplitz connected with his crusher was proved by the fact that a lot of bets had been placed before the bout—even by a number of sportsmen who were close friends of Joe's—that the Baltimore batter would do the knocking out, if the contest was to finish that way. The big feature of Chaney's two knockouts within ten days was that his conquerors were—and, for that matter, still are stable mates.

Now, Tiplitz is to get another opportunity to follow in the footsteps of the more illustrious Tendler. Several weeks ago, about a week after Georges Papin, lightweight champion of France, arrived in America, Tendler was selected for the foreigner's first opponent in this country. Tendler knocked down Papin five times and finally Georges was counted out in the sixth round.

"Tip" to Get Chance On Wednesday night of this week Papin will find himself stacked up against Tiplitz, and Joe will have eight rounds in which to repeat the feat accomplished by his stable mate and pal, Tendler. "Tip" was so anxious to be at his best when he answered the tangle of the "gong" against Papin that he turned down a guarantee of $1500 to meet Rocky Kansas in Buffalo tonight.

Levisky a Promoter The Tiplitz-Papin contest is to be the first of four eight-round matches arranged by Battling Levisky at Shibe Park Wednesday night. This will be the Battler's debut as a boxing promoter—all of which doesn't necessarily mean that Levisky plans to retire as a pugilist himself. At the present time negotiations are on for a bout between Levisky and Georges Carpentier, the "Wonder Man," French idol and European heavyweight champion.

Following the bout between Tiplitz and Papin will be numbers as follows: Johnny Murray vs. Harry Kid Brown; Eddie Fitzsimmons vs. Frankie Gallahan and Johnny Wilson vs. Augie Ratner. This will be Wilson's first bout as middleweight champion of the world, following his recent victory over Mike O'Dowd, in which he was rendered the referee's decision after a twelve-round bout in Boston.

POOR SPORTSMANSHIP

Manager Warns Other Clubs

With the score 8 to 1 in his team's favor, Manager James King, of the Hunting Social, ordered his men off the field at the end of the seventh inning of a game with the Legion A. A., following a discussion with the umpire on several decisions. Manager King says that his players were "stoned," when they left the field in their truck. "I would advise teams on the Legion schedule to get their guarantees before the game," said King today. "We played on a percentage basis, but we were refused the money coming to us."

This was the seventh consecutive victory for Hunting Social.

West Phila. Defeats Park Edge

Before a large crowd at Thirty-eighth and Girard avenue, yesterday, the West Philadelphia Club defeated the Park Edge A. C., 8 to 5. Jimmie Finney, of South Philadelphia High, carried the West Philas to victory, hitting twice and holding Park Edge to four hits. D. Swearer fouled out with two home runs, while McClellan had one.

LYON BIG STAR IN FENCING TRYOUTS

Local Foisman Wins Eight of Nine Matches in Olympic Trials

Arthur S. Lyon, of this city, who competes for the Fencers' Club of New York, was the big star of the tryouts for the Olympic team held Saturday at the Merion Cricket Club.

Lyon won eight of his nine matches and is virtually sure of making the United States team which will compete abroad. The next tryouts will be held at Travers Island later this month.

Leon Nunes, who has been forging to the front rank of American fencers at a rapid clip, carried off second honors, winning seven matches and being defeated twice. Ray Dutcher, former national amateur champion, fared very badly, having defeated a number of times. Another former champion who was off form in this event was B. H. Breed, who was a member of the American team which went to Stockholm in 1912. H. M. Raynor, another former champion, was also defeated several times during the afternoon matches.

B. H. Breed, however, redeemed himself by his brilliant foil work when he tied for first honors, having four victories and only one defeat. H. M. Raynor also found himself in this event, having the same score that Breed turned in. Colonel Sears finished third, with three victories and two defeats.

The saber contests, which were long drawn out, and finally concluded when some of the men had to leave to make train connections, showed that the United States will have a strong team in this event to send abroad. Fullinwider, the recent Annapolis graduate who not long ago won the intercollegiate title, was the best of the American fencers. He had little trouble in placing on the American team.

Nunes and Lyon also showed up as well as they did in the Olympic matches. In order that the matches would not take so long, it was decided to award the decision to the man gaining three touches instead of five, which is usually the custom. Each man had nine foil matches, and the total number of Epee tilts was forty-five, so that it was impossible to hold all the saber contests, which would have been about sixty.

BASEBALL PLAYERS GYPSIES OF SPORT

Few Big League Tossers Have Stuck to the Old Homestead—Cobb, Johnson, Hornsby and Sisler Notable Exceptions to the Rule

By GRANTLAND RICE

June Sport Outside my window there's a catbird singing Where the June winds whisper through the bending trees: And down from the hills there's a lost wind bringing A thousand dreams on the vagabond breeze. You'll say, I know, there's a dull bard stalling, Wasting words just to fill up space; But for all of that there's a catbird calling, And the breath of June is upon my face.

Shifting Stars DID you ever take time to note the number of ballroom headliners this season who have been sold or traded from one team to another?

Cobb and Johnson have stuck to the old homestead through their long careers. Hornsby has never shifted from St. Louis. The same holds for George Sis
