

BISHOP BERRY HITS GRIED FOR MONEY

Methodist Leader Tells Pennsylvania Military College Class to Avoid High Altitude

STRIKES AT PROFITERS

Money grabbers, both rich and poor, were scored by Bishop Berry in his baccalaureate sermon to the graduates of the Pennsylvania Military College in the Madison Street Methodist Church, Chester, yesterday.

The bishop vigorously criticized the capitalist who goes after either one million, the commercial climber who fights for an additional $100,000, and the labor unionist who convulses to snatch another dollar from resisting capital.

The bishop termed the striving of these men as the "overhauling era of twentieth century greed." He warned the cadets that when they went out into the world they would find the eyes of the world fastened upon the glittering sum men fastened upon; that they would discover the world today is staking all upon stocks, bonds, mortgages, excess profits, stock-piling men, it is all right for you to be ambitious," the bishop said, "and work for the good things of life, but work for the good things of life—monument has character—character shining with good deeds and self-sacrifice. Do not forget that all of our great men—our great masters like Dante, Milton and Shakespeare—borrowed their central idea from the Man of Galilee. They are but shining fragments of His glory. The sermon on the Mount was the first great human document of democracy, and before it was enunciated the world was at midnight with the darkness of sin and ignorance."

MISS LILA ACHESON
Director of first eastern summer school for immigrant workers' children at Riverton, N. J.

TO SCHOOL ROVING KIDDIES

Miss Lila Acheson Will Open Institution for Children Today

Upon Miss Lila Acheson, director of the first eastern states summer school for migrant workers' children, which opens today at Riverton, N. J., devolves the responsibility of protecting communities in the strawberry districts from roving bands of youngsters.

The parents have for years moved from the cities to New Jersey and other communities to pick strawberries in summer. Their children go along, and have been developed by the surveys of the Interchurch World Movement that these children are entirely uneducated. They are bothersome to residents of localities where their parents work in the berry fields, and grow up without supervision and guidance.

Children will be taken by motor bus each morning to the school, where there is a day nursery for the youngest and graded schools for the others, with a good noon-time meal. Miss Acheson is assisted by Miss Emily Yates, of the Trenton Young Men's Christian Association, and Miss Margaret Ward, of Hartford, Conn.; also Miss Marie Donfro, of Washington, D. C.

DEATH STARTS WAR AGAINST SPARKLER

Mayor Will Be Asked to Put Ban on Fireworks Causing Fatality

FIRST VICTIM THIS YEAR

Mayor Moore will be asked to prohibit the sale of "harmless" Fourth of July sparklers today. A delegation of city officials will ask such action as the result of the death of Cotter Slack, seven years old, this year's first victim of the sparkler.

Cotter, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Slack, 714 South Fifth, ninth street, died Friday night after four days and nights of agony. His clothes were ignited Monday night while he was playing with a "harmless" sparkler. The funeral will be tomorrow.

Although no less than thirty-seven little boys and girls of this city have met death in the last thirteen years as a result of playing with the "harmless" sparkler, the police department thus far has persisted in its attitude of not including the deadly toys in the restrictions governing the sale of fireworks sent to the dealers each year. This year's regulations, issued by the police last April, again failed even to mention the sparkler.

Cortelyou Investigates Boy's Death

Prominent members of the administration are determined that this condition must be changed at once and for good and all. Director Cortelyou, of the Department of Public Safety, yesterday began an investigation of the "harmless" sparkler. He has pledged himself to do all in his power to have the "harmless" sparkler placed under the police ban, and he is one of the men who will confer on the subject with the Mayor today.

Another member of the city government who has promised to use his influence for the protection of Philadelphia's youngsters is Edward A. Noppel, assistant director of the Department of Public Welfare and chairman of the municipal committee on a safe and sane Fourth celebration.

Police Captain Sympathetic

Captain George S. Tempest, assistant superintendent of police, yesterday expressed confidence that Director Cortelyou's investigation would result in an order forbidding the sale of the "harmless" sparkler.

"The order has to come from the director," said Captain Tempest. "Without his approval, the superintendent can do nothing in a case like this. But I am confident the order will be issued in time."

Water Rent Total Rises

$160,000 Increase So Far This Year Says Treasurer

The total payments made to the receiver of taxes on account of water rents for the current year to date, according to the records of that department, amounted approximately to $4,350,000, while the meter bills sent out in the second quarter of 1920 are $190,000 in excess of those sent out in the corresponding period last year. The accounts collectible and the meter receipts anticipated, so it is declared by Carlotta E. Davis, chief of the Bureau of Water, giving the expectation that the high-water mark of last year will be nearly equaled this year.

Three grandsons of Abraham Lincoln's pastor, the Rev. Phineas D. Gurley, conducted the service last evening at the Second Presbyterian Church. Twenty-first and Walnut streets. Their grandfather was at the death of Lincoln, and a few years later, in 1847, he was elected moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly. The Gergymen who participated in the service were the Rev. Melville B. Gurley, assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Germantown, and his brothers, the Rev. Alvin B. Gurley, assistant minister at the Second Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Richard Hamilton Gurley, assistant to the Rev. Dr. John Mockridge at St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church.

AMERICAN FLAG'S ADOPTION CELEBRATED BY CITY TODAY

Betsy Ross Memorial Association and P. O. S. of A. Will Be in Charge of Exercises at Historic House—Scouts Plan Reception

The 143d anniversary of the adoption of the American flag by the Continental Congress is being celebrated in true patriotic fashion in Philadelphia.

Business establishments and homes are profusely decorated with the Stars and Stripes and numerous patriotic celebrations will be held during the afternoon and evening.

The big celebration will be held at the Betsy Ross House, 230 Arch street. The American Flag House and the Betsy Ross Memorial Association will be in charge of the afternoon program and the Patriotic Order Sons of America the evening program.

Louis Nusbaum, associate superintendent of schools, will speak in the afternoon. Mayor Moore is the principal speaker scheduled for the night session. Governor Sprout will attend the latter.

The citizens' committee and the Boy Scouts will hold observances at Independence Hall this afternoon. An American flag, made in the Betsy Ross House with the stars and stripes, will be unfurled during the citizens' meeting. The Boy Scout celebration is scheduled for 4:30 o'clock. Mayor Moore will speak. The affair will be in the nature of a reception to troops formed since Flag Day of last year.

At 4:30 this afternoon the Frankford Arsenal will celebrate the adoption of the national emblem by raising the garrison flag and firing the national salute. An address will be made by the commanding officer. The parade ground of the Arsenal will be open to the public and invitations to participate have been extended to the various churches, schools and manufacturing plants in the northeastern section of the city. A baseball game and dancing will follow. Music will be furnished by the navy yard band.

Exercises were conducted yesterday at Valley Forge in honor of the men who fought in order that we might have a national flag. The Rev. George John Walenta, of St. Simeon's Church, made the address in the Washington Memorial Chapel. An endorsement to provide for flowers being placed on the Washington altar each Flag Day was presented by Mrs. M. B. H. Murphy, of Denver, Col.

LABOR IS AGAINST P. R. T. FARE RISE

Petition of 20,000 Names Will Be Presented at Public Service Hearing Wednesday

Organized labor has joined in the fight against fare rises by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. A petition containing at least 20,000 names will be presented to the Public Service Commission demanding a continuance of the five-cent fare rate.

This action was determined upon at a meeting of the Central Labor Union last night. A. L. Bryson, representing Local No. 64, American Leather Workers, introduced the motion, which was adopted by an unanimous vote.

The commission has a hearing scheduled for Wednesday, at which Thomas E. Mitten's plan to abolish fare transfers for July 1 and charge fares for all children more than thirty-one inches high will be the means of protecting hundreds of little children in the future.

The "harmless" sparkler must go. Children should not be exposed to a gruesome death by faulty police regulations, and parents should be spared the heartbreaking agony of losing their little ones through those horrible playthings.

WOMEN WORKERS ADOPT NEW NAME

Warm Discussion in Choice of "National League of Girls' Clubs"

CARL KELSEY ENTERTAINS

On being assured by a prominent lawyer that it would not be unlawful to take serious action on Sunday, members of the National League of Women Workers, who met at Bryn Mawr College yesterday, voted to change the name of the organization to the National League of Girls' Clubs.

The selection of a name developed some of the warmest discussions of the convention. At the close of the Saturday afternoon session the matter was referred to a committee. That action would have resulted in the postponement of a new name until the next convention at Vassar College in 1922. Several delegates insisted that the name be selected before the convention adjourned yesterday afternoon.

Carl Kelsey, of the University of Pennsylvania, addressed the 700 delegates at the closing session in the gymnasium of Bryn Mawr College yesterday afternoon. In discussing from economics to politics, Mr. Kelsey said: "The next law in Pennsylvania will be one prohibiting Democratic families from adopting orphan children."

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Coughlin, Sandy Hill road, Norristown, believe they have heard from the abductor of Blakely Coughlin, their thirteen-month-old baby, who was stolen from his crib the night of June 2.

A letter was received this morning postmarked Atlantic City. In it the writer says he has been following developments in the newspapers and will meet the father's demands for proof before setting a place to pay the ransom. A picture of the child will be taken, he says, and forwarded to the parents and then a place can be fixed for Mr. Coughlin to pay over the $9000 reward he has offered for the safe return of his child.

Big Family Have Reunion

At Willow Grove Park yesterday afternoon there was a reunion of the Kretschmans, which was attended by 125 members of that family. The family includes many substantial citizens of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other states, descendants of Bernard and Lena Kretschman, who migrated to America in 1836. The reunion took the form of a "grand old-fashioned picnic."

Atlantic City Letter Declares Proof Blakely Is Alive Will Be Forwarded

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Coughlin, Sandy Hill road, Norristown, believe they have heard from the abductor of Blakely Coughlin, their thirteen-month-old baby, who was stolen from his crib the night of June 2.

A letter was received this morning postmarked Atlantic City. A picture of the child will be taken, he says, and forwarded to the parents and then a place can be fixed for Mr. Coughlin to pay over the $9000 reward he has offered for the safe return of his child.

The writer says Blakely has completely recovered from the cold from which he was suffering when stolen and is in perfect health. He urges the parents not to worry.

Mr. and Mrs. Coughlin are anxious to enter into negotiations with the man who has Blakely. The police will not be taken into the parents' confidence in the negotiations.

Better Business Building

An interesting sidelight on the trend of business our way, is found in the largely increasing number of our new customers who formerly dealt in other stores.

It has been so marked, especially this season, that our salesmen have called attention to it. They are an observant lot of men, and if a customer leaves an old suit to be sent home, which has another store label on it, our men make mental notes.

We are not at all surprised at the trend our way, because we know that many stores having caught the reduced price mania are catering to it rather than sustaining the quality of their merchandise, hence many of their regular customers are dissatisfied.

TEMPLE CLASS WARNED TO SHUN MATERIALISM

Doctor MacCallum, in Baccalaureate, Urges Fidelity to Vows Taken at Graduation

"Allow no material interest to tempt you to be guilty of the crime of infidelity to the vows that you have taken upon the sacred altar of learning at this shrine," was the advice of the Rev. Dr. J. A. MacCallum, pastor of the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, who delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the graduates of Temple University yesterday in the school forum.

"Most of the world's ills today are due to the failure of the leaders to make truth their highest interest," the clergyman said. "The temptation to lower our standards is always strong and here the danger of the educated man is greater than that of the ignorant, for he has further to fall."

Speaking of the dangerous elements that threaten the world, Doctor MacCallum said: "The greatest menace which confronts our nation and our civilization is not the propaganda of Lenin and Trotsky. It is something far deeper than that, for it is rooted in our human nature. The agitator, whatever the brand of his formulas, is but a symptom of our social malady. Strange that so many of our political doctors are ready to treat symptoms in utter ignorance or disregard of the underlying causes."

"Let us be loyal enough to make a frank confession. The 'Hobbs' are but a reflex of our ruling ideas. These are material rather than spiritual and because of the ruling classes put the stress upon money, dress, sensuous pleasure and display. It is not surprising that the forces of discontent fix their gaze on the same values. If we persist in our materialism we have no guaranty against the same fate which befell the glory of Greece and the grandeur that was Rome."

"Our ideals must be transformed from the material to the spiritual. We must work out a new standard of values in which the teacher will not be starved while the vendor of things that perish grows fat. But we can never rise to that level of action in our strength. Religion alone will afford the motive which will enable a man to choose virtue rather than wealth or truth rather than popularity. Education never can take the place of religion. It increases a man's power, but unless it is sustained by religion it does not develop his character."
