A historical parade in which 2000 people will take part will be the opening feature of Bristol's celebration of the 200th anniversary of its incorporation as a borough, which begins today and will continue through tomorrow and parade, divided into ten histor deal divisions and thirty-five exhibits, picturing the development of the town from the earliest Colonial times down its activities in the late war, wil move at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Mayor Moore Will Review the Parade Bristol is beginning to all with for-mer residents and visitors, and the townspeople are prepared to receive a thousand guests for the celebration, which will take on many of the aspects of an "old-home" occasion.

Doron Green is president of the Bicentennial Anniversary Association and his knowledge of Bucks county history is back of most of the pageants and his-torical groups that will be enacted. Franklin Gilkeson is acting as vice pres-ident of the organization. Serrill D. Detlefson is secretary and W. H. H.

Incorporated in 1720

The incorporation of the borough of Bristol took place on November 14. 720, when the charter with the necessary letters patent was received from England by the townspeople. This occasion will be shown in several exhibits of the parade, in which will appear the first chief burgess, impersonated by Minot J. Hill; the second burgess, im-personated by James H. Brooks, and personated by James H. Brooks, and the first town council, depicted by the Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. I.

Walter F. Leedom will serve as chief marshal of this afternoon's parade and on his staff will be John McGinley, W. Firman Young, Joseph B. Keating and John Sackville. G. Morris Randall.

Morris Shields, Clarence Buckman, W. Albersson Haines, Joseph Wright, John E. Betz, Joseph Gilardy, Louis Merola and Hugh Eastburn will act as aides. and Hugh Eastburn will act as aides. One of the features of the parade will the original coach in which Gen eral Lafayette visited Bristol in 1824. At that time he was accompanied by members of the First City Troop of Philadelphia, and the old coach will be under the escort of a half dozen city troopers when it again passes through the streets of Bristol this afternoon. the only improvements required being a little shrinking of the axles and the application of carriage grease.

The parade will be headed by a group of Algonquin Indians, depicted by the Bristol Tribe of Red Men and deliting tables.

Old Settlers Follow Next will follow early English, Dutch and Swedish settlets, as portayed by the pupils of the Bristol High School. The coming of William Penn and his followers in 1682 will be depicted by the Bristol Council of the Daughters of America. Other exhibits in the first division will show the first postal system. Bristol chartered as a market town, and as the seat of jus-tice of Bucks county in 1705.

After the groups showing the chartering of the borough will come the first stage wagons, the old Bristol fairs and the founding of the Methodist Episcopal Church by Captain Webb, of the Eng-

The third division will include General Washington and his staff, the Bristal company of Continental militia and tal company of Continental militia and a company of English Light Horse Cavalry, which made a night attack on the town at the time the British held Philadelphia during the Revolutionary War, and sailors from the old Delaware river fleet.
