This is the way that building lumber is handled now:

A builder is putting up a big mill, or a double row of, houses,-perhaps both. He contracts with a dealer for all the lumber required,-large quantities of joists, studding, rafters, flooring, siding, shingles, etc. No one mill makes all of these, and dealers cannot carry such quantities in city yards, for rent charges make it too costly.

Such lumber is commonly cut to order, the work being distributed among a number of mills. But some are too busy to fill the orders; others ask too high a price; some will accept the orders and then fail to make delivery. There is trouble in great variety. Still, it's the best method available to dealers at present. At Sumter, S. C., our railway "hub," we are building up a new kind of lumber center. It is right among the Southern mills. Freight cars can usually be had there even when they are scarcest at less central points. Ground is cheap, and lower-priced labor reduces the cost of handling.

But the great advantage of Sumter is that it will often save us one or two handlings altogether. There we can carry stocks that will always keep our Philadelphia yards supplied. We can ship from Sumter direct to any railroad point. Much lumber will not enter our Philadelphia yards at all. You can guess the saving in time and cost.

But there's more to tell. While you wait, remember: Some Jay you'll build. If you want the work fin-ished on time, see that the lumber comes from LLOYD.

As the picture indicates here is a roll roofing for every sort of building.

All are made on an asphalt saturated wool felt base, and built up with asphalt. All are approved by Underwriters Laboratories. And there are four distinct fire-resisting finishes: Silica on the wonderful wearing Premium: Talc on the high-grade Philco; Everlasting Flake Mica on the Mica-Kote; and beautiful slate, red or green, on the Lastile.

All are furnished in several weights and can be used for siding as well as roofing, and all are low in price for value received. Talk over with us which one you need.

The mileage record tells the tale of motor oil quality

Miles per gallon is the one simple, . sure test of motor oil quality.

The function of lubricants is to resist or counteract heat. Quality lubricants offer much greater resistance to heat (that is what quality means in motor oil), therefore they last - longer.

This test will prove to you that real quality puts money in your pocket. Wherever you see the Crew Levick trade-mark you can buy these Crew
