

KIDS, ON "SOUPY ISLAND" TRIP IN SEVENTH HEAVEN OF JOYS

Crowds of Youngsters From Congested Sections of City Have Time of Lives at Red Bank Sanatorium

"Get off me feet, won't you!" came a voice almost lost in the shouts of a crowd of youngsters at the South street pier yesterday.

"So, in a minute!" answered the offender, gallantly.

"Now, watch your step—there's time for all!" insisted the guard.

But some of the children knew otherwise. There are several choice places on the "Lizale" and "Johnnie" well remembered from last year. Not that the boys and girls "stay put" when they find their favorite corner on the Red Bank Sanatorium boat, but they just want to make sure that it's there. Oh, dear, no! They're far too healthy this year to sit still.

Crowding threatened to overcome politeness yesterday on the first trip of the season, but civility was rigidly enforced, and girls and mothers calmly boarded the boat while the strong arm of law held back the boys.

Island Some Place

"Soupy island's some place," Tony, an experienced lad, told his new friend. "I'll say it is," answered Jimmie, as he tugged contentedly at a large safety pin, the only point of reliable contact between a much-too-large pair of trousers and a buttonless shirt.

The overall craze has reached the island this year. Overall and gingham dresses are by far the prevailing mode. But there is no set fashion and almost anything this side of nothing is permitted, with some exceptions for elaborate dressing, such as the spike-and-span clothes of Sarah May before some hasty companion stepped on her white shoes. After a severe glance at the culprit Sarah May with dignity lifted her feet to the bench and cleaned the dirty shoe with her gray petticoat. Composure was restored.

This is the forty-fourth season for the Sanatorium Association of Philadelphia, which furnishes day trips to Red Bank for the youngsters who live in congested neighborhoods of the city. There is bathing, with a pool for the girls and a pool for the boys, baby baths for the wee ones and real tubs for the mothers. Everybody bathes at Red Bank.

Swings and slides and sand banks and a merry-go-round keep the children amused for hours in the wholesome out-of-doors.

Soup Touches Spot

But the soup served in the middle of the day is the thing that touches the spot and gives the name of "Soupy Island" to the place. It's very good soup, made of meat and vegetables and barley.

One thing the island needs is a checking system for the clothes of bathers. The boys throw their clothes on a pile and the first one out of the pool gets the pick. Sometimes, and not infrequently, the last boy or two in the pool finds no clothes left and has to stay in the water until barrels or emergency clothing is found.

Last year there were 55,071 visitors to the island and the steamers made 737 trips. Forty-five thousand eight hundred and sixty stood in line for rides on the merry-go-round and 26,000 of the visitors took baths, including 901 babies.

The high cost of feeding the crowd can easily be guessed from the report of the kitchen, that shows 19,200 quarts of soup were served, 1458 quarts of milk and fifty-three barrels of crackers.

In the hospital 216 patients received treatment in the outpatient department. The Sanatorium Association is supported by voluntary contributions from interested citizens. Many "alumni" of the early years of the Red Bank journey have served in the war, a number being to exclusive clubs of this city, and very many are successful businessmen, who now help with contributions.

Nine hundred visited Red Bank the first day of the season, some from Kensington, where there is a new stop this year at the Penn Treaty Park.

CAMDEN FIREMEN HOPEFUL

Council Takes Step Toward Two-Platoon System

The two-platoon system for the Camden firemen was given a substantial boost by Councilman Forsyth, chairman of the fire committee, who informed the members of City Council last night that his committee was working with Fire Chief Carter and a committee of city firemen to have the matter of shorter hours for the fire fighters brought before Council for favorable action.

Another step was taken to secure a memorial hall to be erected in honor of the city's heroic dead who gave their lives during the war. Only one councilman opposed the plan to erect the structure on the site of the old Camden Cemetery. City Council Clerkley was instructed to secure the con-
