Charles A. Munns, who have been York, intend sailing for Europe next week to motor through France, Belgium and possibly Italy. It's remarkable how many are going over this summer in apite of the privations they will have to undergo, for there is great scarcity of food abroad. But, then, the battle-fields will perhaps not be in as realistic a condition later, because there will certainly be a good deal of reconstruc-

FF ANY of us pay close attention to the social register we must have been greatly shocked to see in the "Dilatory Domiciles" of April and May, recently added to the book, the death of Mrs. Ratcliffe Caperton. I imagine it was a Ratchine Caperton. I imagine it was a decided shock to Mrs. Caperton herself, to say nothing of her family. It is hard to tell how these mistakes occur, but certain it is that the register has many certain it is that the register that this year. It has the record of one warriage which never took place, and marriage which never took place, and even gives the address of the supposed newlyweds, who had broken their engagement and probably had forgotten about said house they were to have lived in by the time the register came out. Anyway, Mrs. Caperton, I am thankful to tell you, is well and living at her home, 1609 Pine street; but she and her daughter Nancy are going up to Laurence, L. I., on Friday to stay a portion of the summer there and later they will go to New England and then back to their home, at 1609 Pine street,

DID you hear about the marriage of Miss Evelyn Longman, the sculp-tress, on Monday, to Mr. Nathaniel Horton Batchelder, headmaster of the Leomis School in Windsor, Conn.? The wedding was out of doors, in a glade on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel French, at Stockbridge, Mass. The bride's costume was decidedly nal in that it was of medieval cut, and it was of deep cream satin trimmed with gold and pearls. Instead of the conventional bridal veil of tulle or lace Instead of the he bride wore a veil of gold net which was arranged on her hair under a coro t of gold leaves and pearls. And for bouquet she carried white and yellow abouquet she carried white and yellow folumbine. It sounds wonderfully statuesque, don't you think? The Mrs. Albert P. Rippey, of Mt. And the rest of the trip was filled with extra thrills for all the is Eleanor—I haven't seen her since I left college!" And the rest of the trip was filled with extra thrills for all the gother occupants of the car, because straightaway she began to wave to said tigirl, who looked across, questioningly at first, and then broke into smiles and waved wildly, too. So it went, and all through that journey both girls waved and sand smiled and called.

Well, they reached the ground, and the first one could scarcely talk to the man with her she was so excited to talk with "Eleanor". Finally, Eleanor's car came to a standstill and she rushed out and the girls flew into each other's arms and kissed each other violently, and then separated to look each other over, to find that they were perfect strangers. Each had thought the other a long lost chum. I wish you could have seen their faces. They were so rattled they did not know what to do, but one of the men said to the other during the kissing episode. "Well, if it's as easy as that, I'm for it."

HOPPING AT THE

DURING THE LAST OF JUNE AND THE FIRST OF JULY THERE ARE ALWAYS EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD VALUES OFFERED AT THE SHOPS. THROUGH HER PRES-TIGE AS A SHOPPER, PAULETTE IS OFTEN ENABLED TO GLEAN ADVANCE INFORMATION REGARDING TEMPTING BARGAINS - INFORMATION WHICH SHE WILL GIVE TO YOU AS QUICKLY AS POS-SIBLE THROUGH THIS COLUMN.

Bargains delight my soul-that is, "real" bargains. You can, therefore, imagine my delight when I found at that reliable shop of B. F. Dewees, 1122 Chestnut street, three perfect plums! Listen, exquisite neckwear, of all kinds, even to vestees with attached collars, for half price and less. I was astounded with the exquisite quality when compared with the prices. Then, silk remnants are to be had, in blouse and dress lengths, all kinds and colors, at half price. On the second floor you will find hats created by one of New York's best designers, sports models so fine and crushable that you can squeeze them into your bag or pocket, in all the pastel tints, and they are selling at $10.75, though at another shop I saw them for $15. They come in two straws-finest milan hemp and chrysanthemum braid. Of course, these wonderful bargains won't last very long.

I wonder if you know that Bonwit Teller's, at Thirteenth and Chestnut streets, have one of the smartest, most complete perfume counters in our city, where one can get the rare and unusual or the standard perfumes when it is impossible to get them elsewhere. It is difficult to get Houbigant's talcum at present, yet this shop has it in the lovely fragrance of Quelquels Fleur and also Ideal. It is well worth its $1 a bottle, for it is almost a sachet. The Houbigant sachets, by the way, can be obtained here for $2.50 and, of course, are delightful. That much desired Emulsion of Cucumber, Marie Earle's, is also here, at $5.75, and the shop carries regularly those excellent preparations of Elizabeth Arden's. Have you ever tried that marvelous face powder, "Ambre Royal"? It has a subtle violet fragrance, and is to be had in white, flesh and rachel. The price is $2.50 a box, but it comes in generous quantity, and is so satisfactory. Really, it is a most unusual counter for getting practically any good toilet preparation you may happen to want.

Have you lately been in Sterling's, at 1210 Walnut street? They have some very special reductions at the present time. Garments already marked at very reasonable prices are subject to 20% discount when you purchase able prices are subject to 20% discount when you purchase—even the newest. Here, too, can be had those navy cotton frocks, so scarce and so much desired, prices beginning at $16.50. Let me tell you, too, about Sterling's custom tailoring department—it's very famous, you know—for a short time you will receive 20% off even the prices of made-to-order suits, whose summer prices without the discount are $115 and $125 for exquisitely tailored tricotines and $115 for English tweed and sports suits—so you see the 20% deducted makes them considerably less.

Twice a year Chertak-Wenger, located at the House of Wenger, 1229 Walnut street, has a clearance sale of her millinery, and a Chertak-Wenger hat, take my word for it, is the last word in exclusiveness and is of unsurpassed quality. Therefore, a Chertak model for $8 is almost a present, for these exquisite chapeaux usually hover in the neighborhood of forty whole dollars! Well, such a sale will Chertak-Wenger hold tomorrow, and I advise you to be there, for practically every summer model is to be included, and that will mean a glorious array indeed! There are hats for all occasions, all types, and of all colors and kinds of materials. At the same time, it is well to remember that upon the floor above the House of Wenger has a royal group of summer furs that you will delight in seeing-I always take a trip up in the jewel-box of an elevator when I visit Chertak—and remember, too, that Mr. Wenger is now taking orders for winter furs at prices much less than he can

While you are in the neighborhood, stop in at the shop of L. Stone, 1306 Walnut street. He will have a most thorough clearance sale tomorrow, I am informed, of all summer and late spring apparel, so that dresses, suits and wraps which were formerly priced at $49.50 to $175 can actually be had for three prices, namely, $18, $35 and $50. Of course, at these low prices every sale must be final. I understand that nothing is to be reserved. There are frocks for all warm-weather occasions and in all sizes, from maids to matrons. What do you wish, voile, swiss, organdie, batiste, silk, georgette, gingham? Here you will find it, interestingly fashioned, and at a price less than within reason. Don't forget to include this shop in your next shopping trip-and, of course, the sooner the better.
