DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

THE OUTLAW By DADDY

(Peggy and Billy are called to Birdland by a report that Judge Owl has turned into an outlaw. They save the judge from men who want to shoot him because they say he has stolen little chickens. Caw-Caw Crow tries to betray the judge to the men.)

Judge Owl Explains THE hunters were sure they would find Judge Owl in the thicket above which Caw-Caw Crow was making such a fuss. Caw-Caw Crow was sure, too, and he kept up his loud cawing: "You'll find him there! Shoot him! Shoot him!

and he kept up his loud cawing: "You'll find him there! Shoot him! Shoot him!"
But the men didn't find Judge Owl for the very good reason that the judge was hiding with Peggy and Billy in a clump of bushes on a hill. The men grew angry.

"That cawing crow is tricking us." "That cawing crow is tricking us." "That cawing crow is tricking us." "That cawing crow his tail feathers. he shot at Caw-Caw Crow. The shot took Caw-Caw Crow by surprise. It also took away three of his tail feathers. He was a most startled crow, but he didn't waste a second of time in getting away from there. He was eager to have Judge Owl shot, but he wasn't a bit anxious to get shot himself.

"Good!" chuckled Judge Owl. "He will not chase us any more."

The men after taking the shot at Caw-Caw Crow, walked away in disgust. They had wasted a lot of time without doing what they wanted to do—which was to catch the thief who had stolen their little chickens.

Now that the danger was past Peggy turned to question Judge Owl.

"Is it true you have turned into an outlaw?" she asked.

"Those men think I have," chuckled Judge Owl.

"And they have good reason to think so." declared Billy severely. "Things look pretty black against you. How about those owl feathers in the chicken coop; how about the night raid; how about the chicken bones and feathers around your hollow tree?"

Judge Owl chuckled again, and winked at Billy, as he answered him with another question:

"And how about you sending those men climbing the tree to Caw-Caw Crow's nest so you could steal their guns?" he asked.

"I didn't steal their guns," hotly replied Billy, "and I never even thought about hiding the guns until the hunters talked of shooting you."

"Oh, so that wasn't true. But things looked nestly black against you."

turn red, for he didn't know what to say.

Peggy, who had been looking at Judge Owl with puzzled eyes, now gave a glad cry.

"Oh, you mean it isn't any more true that you are an outlaw than that Billy intended to steal their guns. It's just a case of things looking bad when they aren't bad at all."

"Hoo! Hoo!! Princess Peggy is wise," chuckled Judge Owl. "Of course I'm not an outlaw, and I never stole those little chickens. Although I will admit that some members of the owl family like little chickens and are not above stealing them if they can't get them any other way."

other way."

"Then how about those owl feathers in the chicken coop and those chicken feathers about your nest?" asked Billy.

"And how about those owl feathers in Caw-Caw Crow's nest? I never put them there," said Judge Owl. "An enemy is trying to give me a bad name and trying to get me punished as an outlaw. Who that enemy is, I don't know for Sure yet."

dock project has been abandoned. About a month ago the John Baizley Iron Works, of Philadelphia, introduced a proposal before Council that certain city property be vacated and later withdrew the proposal with the understanding that a new one would be filed last night. Councilmen expressed the opinion that the city has been used for an ulterior purpose in the introduction of the dry dock scheme.
