But there was no gainsaying the genuineness of the tribute he received even in defeat. It was given to the man with an utter abandon, without aid of band or pipe organ or other trap-pings of organized political demonstras. It sprang from the galleries, voteless multitude that made the its admiration for the man.

But there were others who sat un-moved. They formed a solid block in the center of the floor about which the sea of sound and feeling raged unheeded and even as Bryan grasped the Ne-braska standard thrust up to him from below and lifted it high on the speak-er's stand, it must have been given to a wisdow born of his long political cawisdom born of his long political caof the great scene to know that it was admiration, not agreement, that moved the people: that defeat, not victory,

It was plain that it was the bonedry issue on which Mr. Bryan would center his effort to sweep the convention off its feet. He had something to say for the League of Nations program of ratification with reservations which he proposed. On this he flatly differed with the President at the Jackson Day dinner in Washington to set going the struggle that ended yesterday in sweeping victory for the President. He paid lavish tribute to Mr. Wilson's place in history and to his leadership; he talked forcefully of three lesser issues he had brought to the convention for decision; but it was the dry plank on which he had staked every vestige of of tremendous 'noes' which sent the magnetic power over men's hearts he Bryan plank to defeat.
