Dear Cynthia—A few weeks ago I met a boy who used to go to school with me. I invited him into the house, but not for as long as he stayed, which was eight hours. Since then he comes afmost every day uninvited and stays a long time. He is very ungentiemanly and has had manners. For I shall cast them a thousand fathoms deep into the pool of derision. Their master minds, by a series of marvelous deductions and hours of intensive study, have found that I am mentally deficient. Yet I chuckle with unholy gies to note that they dared not attack my statements to prove them wrong. And therein lay their wisdom, for they know it would be but tilting at windmills to attempt to prove my argument wrong.

But one moment, "Billie," perchance you think you know a thing or two. Good. Answer either of these two questions. What and why is love? What is the true source of pleasure in duncing?
