Nancy Wynne Speaks of the Number of Debutantes to be Introduced Next Year-She Chats About the Philadelphians Who Sailed Yesterday for Europe

EVERY day one hears of another debutante whose coming out is scheduled for next year. We have Sidscheduled for next year. We have so will be presents. Mr. and Mrs. Huchtels will show a bridge party this attendor in honor of Mrs. Hughes, at which the following guests will be presents. Mrs. E. Waring Wilson, Mrs. Cyvus Radford, Mrs. Paxton Deater, Mrs. Cyvus Radford, Mrs. Herbert S. Casey, Mrs. Raph H. Mrs. Will Mrs. Herbert S. Casey, Mrs. Ann She is the daughter of the late Alfred Paul Morris and Mrs. Morris, of Villanova. Anne Ashton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Ashton, is another and Mrs. Inomas Ashton, as another who will be introduced in October, and Catherine Knight, daughter of Mrs. Bradford Knight and sister of Mary

Knight, who came out this year. The Sewells had first planned to give The Sewells had first planned to give a tea for Helen on October 16, but have decided on October 5 instead. Helen will have a ripping good time I doubt not. She is rather tall and slender, with fair hair and blue eyes, and gives with fair hair and blue eyes, and gives one the impression of vitality and health derived from good exercise with the least of the heavy atheres. ent being in the least of the heavy ath-letic type. A yesterday for Europe. Perhaps that is a bit of exaggeration to say a great many, but there were a number of them. anyway. Rose Dolan had planned originally to go to Newport for a while first and then join her grandmother in Paris next mouth but in these days Paris next month, but in these days when it is so difficult to get passage, the demand being very great, I suppose she found she could go now, and so she went. The Oliver Eaton Cromwells also sailed yesterday and they will spend most of the summer in France and England.

It must be awfully exciting to go over this summer with so much of the battle-fields still to be seen; with no butter had, and small portions of food allowed even yet, for there is great scarcity in Europe. However, the most tumble-down looking little inns-have the most delicious tasting food and a bottle most delicions tasting food and a continue of "red ink" served with it, sometimes costing as much as fifty cents and other times about eighty. This, of course, in the country and small towns, that is what is left standing of the small towns in northern France.

For even though French money is only worth a third as much now as before the war, and every thing is twice as much over there as it used to be, you still get things cheaper than you do on

It's true it is a good time for those who have been over before and who know the ropes to go, but I guess the American who has never been in Europe before will spend an awful lot before returning home again.

ET'S see who else have I heard L sailed yesterday? Oh, yes! the Charles Munns. They expect to stay away all of July and August and return probably before the horse show time

I think Mrs. Munn has been looking or more ago in town, wearing a very smart dark blue embroidered georgette crepe frock and a small blue toque trimmed with ostrich feathers. She had Pauline with her and that small person was suite entranging in a linear freek was quite entrancing in a linen frock

BILLIE slipped into the room the other day as mother was finishing her breakfast. He looked at her out of her breakfast. He looked at her out of the corner of one eye, for being a little more than two, he gets his impressions more from watching the maternal countenance than from conversation. Mother did not seem to notice, so he lovingly approached the sugar bowl. There was very little there and mother decided to keep quiet and see what he would do. Well, the three lumps disappeared, one by one, between concerned looks in mother's direction and quick demolishment of loot.

When the third lump was finished Rillie could stand the strain no longer, so thinking to get the empty sugar bowl from the scene of action, he called in a lusty voice to the maid: "Carrie, mother's finished," smiled sweetly at mother (he had helped her, you see) and walked quietly from the room.
