so long, the following verses of strong defense and a light attack. rai years ago seem to be still apleable today :

A Camp Song of the Glants bitter days are on us now Across the dreary fold ; he loured no more screathes our cross As in the days of old; heering that once came our way Is silent now and still.
Where black defeat holds us at bay
And life has lost its thrill;
But as the drifting shadow nears Across our pathway strung, We hold one dream of vanished years-

Drep in the Barren Lands at last We face the hopeless fight.
Where mocking echoes of the past Return beyond the night; and ghosts of glory and renown Come back from Long Ago To haunt us as we gallop down The way that leads to woe; But when along the vanquished beat The mournful dirag is suna. The mournful dirge is sung. We hold one dream beyond defeat— When Matty's arm was young.

know the law that rules the game Where all must one day yield; Ve know the fickleness of fame Along the open field; We know the bitterness that comes To those who've held command, When from afar the muffled drums Roll back across the land; but as we reel and fall today, The broken clans among. One dream they cannot take away— When Matty's arm was young.

Two Details YEAR or two ago we asked Miller Huggins if a ball club lacking speed ald ever win a pennant. "Few clubs can have everything." replied. "The old Orioles did-so did the Cubs of Frank Chance and so did the Athletics up to 1914. I mean by that these three clubs had speed, batting power and fine pitching, plus strong destrength along other lines. "If you ever get a club like one these, the rest is simple. I know t Yankees haven't got much speed. H they have two big factors—with t ast in good shape they can make a lot fruns through their hitting and their

Scott Plays His 600th Consecutive Ball Game

Boston, July 14 .- Everett Scott, crack shortstop of the Red Sox, today played his six hundredth consecutive game. He had recently passed all records for consecutive play. The infielder started his unbroken participation in games of the Boston club on June 20, 1916, and in the time since has led the shortstops of the league for four years, in two of which he set new fielding records for the position. Marshall Vanneman was well trained in tennis when he was young, conse-quently it will not be difficult for him 3. quently it will not be difficult for him to make rapid strides at the game. He has a number of good strokes which he executes well. About the only thing he needs is steady play and more tournament experience. Day before yesterday he played cousin Paul almost to a standstill in their first set at Manheim and in the Wilmington tournament for the Delaware state championship he gave Wallace Johnson the hardship he gave Wallace Johnson the hardest battle the latter had before he lost in the final round to Dean Mathey. Mrs. M. B. Huff, of the Philadelphia Country Club. is the 1920 Middle States Women's champion. She won the title yesterday, beating Mrs. W. P. Newhall in the finals, 6-2, 6-3. The Germantown Cricket Club star put 4 5 3 5 4 5 4 5 5—40 up a good game and fought for every point but Mrs. Huff was too good for her. In fact Mrs. Huff played the best game in the two sets against Mrs. Newhall that she has played this year

Mrs. Newhall's left-handed proclivities have been a source of much annoyance to her opponents all year. She forced Mrs. Harvey to the limit in the tevens—

M Huff did not make the fatal mistake trying to play to Mrs. Newhall's left side only to have the balls come speeding back from her foe's forehand. On the contrary, Mrs. Huff played Mrs. Newhall's real back-hand and by the most accurate placements that have been seen in women's competition this season she kept piling up the points until the finish season she kept piling up the points until the finish.

Mrs. Huff and Mrs. Newhall play similar games, both prefering the back court. Neither went past the cross-service line in any of their numerous rallies unless it was necessary to make the get. There was no forcing of the net, simply a battle of placement shots and Mrs. Huff used such excellent generals have shots were set to the eralship and her shots were so true that Mrs. Newhall had little chance from the start.
