General Pablo Gonzalez Believed Backer of Unsuccessful Attempt of Rebels

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, July 15.—Monterey, as attacked by General Ireneo Vilyesterday, according to reports by the war office from General M. Perez Trevino, chief of military op-rations in that state, and General Ar-ulfo Gomez, chief of operations in amaulipas. General Pablo Gonzalez, former canfor the Mexican presidency, is have been responsible for the attack on the city. Generals Trevino, Gomez and Porfirio Gonzalez, governor of Nuevo Leon, are taking "necessary steps" against Pablo Gonzalez, according to a war office statement.

Belief was expressed that General Willareal had not attacked the city with any serious intention of capturing it, but had thought to join forces with Pablo Gonzalez. General P. Elias Calles secretary of war, said that Pablo of war, said that Pablo Souzalez had been responsible for re-sent uprisings in the northern states. It said General Villareal had 250 men nd was being pursued by cavalry com-nanded by General Rios Zertuche in he direction of Topochico, Nuevo Leon. General Calles announced he had or ered the arrest of Pablo Gonzalez, and had directed that he be brought to Mex-leo City for trial on a charge of rebel-General Carlos Garcia, a membe lion. General Carlot of deputies and Gon-of the chamber of deputies and Gon-galez's chief of staff, is also to be ar-rested, says the Universal. The newspaper adds:

"The conciliatory policy of the government is to be abandoned and enerretic measures are to be taken against disturbers of the peace of the na

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

THE GYPSY DOGS

CHAPTER IV The Call for Help

"Now, I will tell you how my father, Shep, the sheep dog, got the stolen horse, Gray Prince, out of the hidden valley in which the gypsies had shut him," barked Toddle Pupkins to Peggy and Billy. Toddle was still chuckling over the clever way in which Shep had found Gray Prince, even though the gypsies had changed his color from gray to brown. "But first tell us what kind of a charm the gypsies used to change Gray Prince into a horse of another color."

Prince into a horse of another color, said Peggy.

"That's a mystery to me," answered Toddle Pupkins. "My father never found

"I think I know," declared Billy. "The "I think I know," declared Billy. "The gypsies made a brown dye out of wainut shucks and dyed Gray Prince's coat just as your mother dyes Easter eggs."

"It might have been that," said Toddle Purkless

"That fooled Snapper and the other dogs, particularly as they themselves, being gypsy dogs, thought gypsy life was all right.

"Father made up his mind he had to use his wits to get Gray Prince out. So and took up his job of bossing the gypsy dogs just as if he meant to stay there his whole life long.

"Every day have been stay there had to stay the sta his whole life long.

"Every day, however, father paid a visit to Gray Prince, and every day he sought a way by which his friend might escape.

"One evening as he studied the fence the thought came to him that while the fence itself was strong enough to hold all the horses, each wire of the many wires that made the fence was so small it could be broken. Why not break a wire at a time, and thus make a hole in the fence?

"Eather at once acted on this idea."

wire at a time, and thus make a hole in the fence?

"Eather at once acted on this idea. He got a stout piece of harness from among the gypsy wagons, and dragged this to the valley. There he put the harness around a wire. The horses took hold of the harness and pulled with all their might. The wire bent and cracked and finally broke. That proved father's idea was right.

"All through the night the horses worked, breaking wire after wire, until just before dawn, the final strand was cut. Then they burst through the hole, all eager to escape.

"Gray Prince generously waited until the last, Shep guided him through the woods, and finally they came to the gypsy camp, by which they had to pass in order to reach the road.

"As they crept along, suddenly a great clamor arose at the other side of the camp among the gypsy dogs. Through the racket they heard loud calls in a strange lady dog's voice: 'Help! Help! Isn't there a gentleman dog here who will help a lady dog in danger?"

"Father stopped at once. 'Go!' he you.'

"'Nay, I will help you save the lady dog,' answered Gray Prince, and he turned back with my father. And thus it was," said Toddie, "that my father
