

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of Plans to Give Three Debutantes Teas the Same Afternoon in Jenkintown. Miss McMichael to Study Abroad

I THINK that's a very good idea, to have three debutantes introduced the same day, in the same part of the country. I suppose you wonder what country? I suppose you wonder what country? I suppose you wonder what country?

It's this. I heard on Saturday that Miss Wynne, Frasier, Jr., has all decided to introduce their daughters out in Jenkintown, Pa., on October 1st. They all live just a few miles apart and it makes it so much easier for the guests to go out there on one day than to go out there on three separate days. And teas in the early October are always so pretty.

Then too, last year it often happened that three debutantes would be presented on the same day in three various parts of the country, one on the Main Line, one in Chestnut Hill, one in the city, or somewhere and another in the Reading. Now try as hard as you could to go to all, you just could not manage it, unless you were rich, and even then you have to go like death and across country to get to the three places within the two given hours of the tea—and you get tired and tired each place some on the Main Line will get together and do the same thing, and Chestnut Hill would not get well. Dorothy might follow on at well. Dorothy might follow on at well. Dorothy might follow on at well.

While on the subject of debutantes I must tell you, Ellen McMichael is not coming out next year, as many have thought. Like Albert Heath and Ellen Lloyd she is going to engage for a year of study before making her bow to society. She is not yet eighteen, and the young girl days before her debut are so short, it seems always a wise plan to take a year, even if they do plan to time-honored age of eighteen before going out.

Ellen McMichael is the daughter of the late Emory McMichals, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Curtis Harrison. She was named Ellen after her grandmother, who was Miss Ellen Wain. Her cousin, George McMichael, who lived with the Emory McMichals, was married last year to Miss Helen Wain.

ing we would play harder than ever to make him forget the ache in his hip. "Little Phil liked best to play among the horses. Lady Ann, my mother, said that was because he had been used to being with horses ever since he was a tiny baby, as his father owned a fine stock farm. "When he was playing among the horses Gray Prince always kept near him, and so did Lady Ann and Sheep. Was to the gipsy horse that tried to kick him, or the gipsy dog that snarled at him, or the gipsy boy that threw a stone at him? Gray Prince's heels were quick to defend him, while Sheep and Lady Ann were ready to fight the instant danger came near him. "All this time Sheep and Lady Ann were planning how they might rescue little Phil from the gipsy camp. They knew little Phil's father and mother were worrying and they knew Gray Prince's owner was waiting for Sheep to bring the stolen horse back home. "But the gipsies kept a very close guard on little Phil. They well knew he was a rich man's son, and thought if they were clever they might get a big ransom for him. Every time Lady Ann or Sheep tried to lead him from the camp they found a gipsy waiting to force him back. "Then one day little Phil himself showed a daring way in which he might be rescued.
