DIRECTORS QUIT THE BOARD AFTER 7-CENT FARE DEFEAT

Ingersoll Also Quits Board After Opposition to No-Transfer Program

Thomas E. Mitten, president of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., stated today emphatically that the people of Philadelphia could feel assured that they would get the best possible street car Bervice.

He said that the Mitten management stood by its record of the past, and that what already had been accomplished would serve as an index of what the public might expect for the future. Mr. Mitten was asked if the developments of yesterday, when E. T. Stotesbury, the financial backer, and two of the banker group, resigned, would interfere with the plans or the general program of the company. Mr. Mitten

Row Over Seven-Cent Fare Mr. Stotesbury severed his connection

The three constituted the backbone of the so-called "bankers' group" in the P. R. T. directory. They tendered their resignations and walked out after a stormy board meeting late yesterday.

"I have not reconsidered my resignation," asserted Mr. Packard this morning. He added he did not believe Mr. of Stotesbury or Mr. Lloyd had either.

Mayor Moore cast the deciding vote against the seven-cent fare rate. The ote of the directorate stood five to five on the measure, with the other two found it topsy-turvy. Running to the representatives of the city against it second floor he found his wife. Asked for Drink of Water

At 4 o'clock Mrs. Dixon answered a ring at her bell and found a man about thirty-two years old, five feet six inches tall, weighing about 136 pounds, and wearing a cap, khaki shirt and no coat. He said he was a huckster and asked if she wanted to buy any fresh produce. When she replied in the negative he asked her for a drink. Mrs. Dixon told him to wait at the door and went in the house for the water.

When she entered the dining-room from the kitchen she was confronted with the man, who had followed her and closed the door. He reached for the glass of water with his left hand.

As she passed it to him, the man struck her violently behind the ear with his right fist. She fell and he jumped on her, beating her until she fell senseless.

The union men as a whole do not seem satisfied with the increase authorized, but there was no talk prior to the executive session of a general strike. The belief grew that the leaders would submit the question to a referendum vote of their men.

Strike Still Possible

Whether the award as given will prevent a strike eventually being called remains to be seen. The leaders of virtually every one of the big unions were present this morning when Judge R. M. Barton, chairman of the board, handed down the decision.

They left immediately to present the award to 1000 general chairman, who had gathered here to pass on its ac-ceptability. They believe their men will stay in line, at least until a referendur vote can be taken. Nearly a month will be needed for the referendum. The board's decision is retroactive to May 1. The maximum increase granted any class was eighteen cents an hour, or $36.72 per month.
