

She Chose A Satin Sports Coat

A Daily Fashion Talk by Florence Rose

TO BE able to get what she wants when she wants it I truly believe is an essential of a very well dressed woman. Many very women have perfectly splendid intentions as far as their clothes are concerned, and if they followed out these day dreams of theirs they would possess both smartness and individuality in their dressing. But they fall down when it comes to putting these plans through. And, of course, you are judged only by results. You might just as well be intended to wear an unbecoming hat as to wear one. The effect is all the same.

Now a clever little friend of mine who dresses extremely well on a very small income made up her mind that instead of getting a suit this season she would get a so-called sports coat of heavy navy blue satin. It seemed to her that the clothes she had on hand and the requirements that she would have on her wardrobe, this was the best selection she could make. She had visions of several made-to-order shirts, one at least to be made at home.

Now it happened that such separate coat was not to be had at the two or three shops she visited, and she was almost overcome with a sense of being sidetracked by some of the many tempting substitutes that were offered to her at last she found the coat she wished it was slightly more expensive than she had thought it would be. But she had what she wanted. It was the important garment in the summer wardrobe that she had planned for herself, and she knew that if she permitted herself to be sidetracked she would regret it. So she got the sports coat, and it is here for your approval today. It is of splendid, heavy satin that will hold up under perpetual wearing, made on straight youthful lines, as you see, with the long collar forming the neck. White buttons, which trim the belt, and the buttons which trim the sleeves. With this sports jacket in the sketch you will see a skirt that she bought to wear with it. It is made of a combination of plain and checked silk, the plain silk and the background of the checked silk being of tan, while the checks are of navy blue. The panel at the front and back are of the plain. The hat, which was also bought to wear with the sports coat, is of white straw, with a soft crown of navy blue satin, the sole trimming being a feather fancy, jauntily placed at the back.

"Every day the gipsies tried out the horses. They had many fast steeds, but the fastest of all were Romney Rye and Gray Prince. With these two the gipsies were sure they could beat any of the horses owned by the town folks.

"In getting ready for the races they took just as good care of Gray Prince as Red Peter took of Romney Rye, his favorite, with the result that when the great day came Gray Prince was in fine form.

"I feel as though I could run swifter than a swallow flies," whispered Gray Prince to his parents, Shep, the sheep dog, and Lady Ann, the colt. "I will beat Romney Rye in the races at the fair today, and tonight I will beat him and all the other speedy horses in the biggest race of all—the race to carry little Phil back to his father and mother.

"The dogs of the gipsy camp were not expected to go to the races with Shep. Lady Ann and myself crept away without being seen and took the fair grounds through a hole in the fence.

"At first there were a lot of small races. Some of the gipsy horses won and some lost, for several of the town horses were swift runners. "Romney Rye and Gray Prince did not go to any of the small races. They were being held for the big race of the day, the two prizes for which were bigger than all the other prizes put together. The gipsies expected Romney Rye to win one of the two prizes and Gray Prince the other.

"This race was to be the best two out of three. That is, instead of just one race to decide the prize, the winner had to win two out of three races. "When the horses were called for the start of the big race, there were the two gipsy horses in it, Romney Rye and Gray Prince, and three town horses. These town horses looked very speedy, indeed, and so did Romney Rye, but Gray Prince looked the speediest of all.

"Go!" shouted the judge as they lined up in front of him, and away they went in a flash. A big bay town horse burst from the front, and Romney Rye, with Red Peter in his saddle, was second. Then came the other two town horses. Romney Rye was in the rear, and saw Gray Prince in the rear, but shep saw Gray Prince in the rear, but shep was waiting for the other horses to wear themselves out, said Shep. "Watch him as they near the finish. If they are not in the lead by the time they reach the circular race track, Gray Prince passed the last two town horses, and became the third in the race. Romney Rye put all his swiftness into his legs and crept up on the bay town horse until he was running neck and neck. The bay horse was a fighter and struggled hard, but Romney Rye fought, too, and finally he showed his head out in front. Then, as the bay horse fell back a bit, Romney Rye thought he had won the race.

"But what was this thunder of hoofs behind him? What was this horse coming up to his flank, then to his shoulder, then to his neck, then running nose and nose with him? "It was Gray Prince—Gray Prince galloping smoothly, strongly, with wonderful speed. Romney Rye spurred. He leaped ahead, but it was only for a moment. Out to the front dashed Gray Prince, a winner by a full length.

"My, how the crowd did yell! 'It's how we dogs did bark! I tell you it was exciting!' and Toddie Pupkins pounced to bark to show them how exciting it was. "We dogs rushed to tell Gray Prince we were glad he had won. Then Gray Prince said something very strange to us. "Don't worry if something had happened to me, he whispered. "I'm going to do a circus horse trick to foil these gipsies, and to fix things so tonight I'll be sure to win my 'race to carry little Phil back home! "

"What Gray Prince's trick was will be told tomorrow.

The Marriage Trifler

Barbara Knight and Keith Grant are married and are in a successful society season. Seemingly they are both blessed by the gods in every way. Barbara's friends and Keith's friends are two entirely different things. Barbara wants to go right to the heart of the matter, the social whirl, while Keith wants love, real love, a few good friends and a home.

Keith had not been looking forward to the summer with any enjoyment. This was to be their first summer as the Keith Grants and they had been discussing the problem of a house. Barbara wanted to take the Chaloners place at Newport and she thought that by establishing their household effects in the enormous stone palace would mean an endless round of house parties, an enormous retinue of servants, and a wasting of the summer months as far as he was concerned.

The Chaloners were in Europe and Marcia, who still advised Keith and Barbara as to what he should and should not do, strongly advised the taking of the old house. "It will do splendidly for this season, and until you decide where you want to build," she advised. "You can't go wrong on this. As far as the small arrangements had not been made, it was pretty well decided that the Keith Grants would move into the Chaloners place at the end of June. "When Barbara left Elsie and Katherine outside of Keith's office as an equal, and she was so confident that in no way had she betrayed her real feelings regarding Keith. A surge of confidence swept over her as she thought of the past days that had led her to feel like meeting life on a different plane. She had had no love life, she would do, but more and more she realized that even if she did not love Keith with all her heart and soul, she did, she did, that pride alone would force her to battle with another woman for him.

"Where is Mr. Grant?" she asked Zola later, when she was in her own room and getting out of her things. "I will see if he has come in," said Zola in her quaint, carefully correct English, and returned a month later to report that Keith was in his den. "Shall I put out the new orchid dress, madame?" she asked Barbara, who was hurrying out of the room.

"Nothing," Barbara flung over her shoulder. She hurried to the room which, out of the entire, gorgeously furnished apartment, she recollected with little triumph was the only one that Keith had furnished after his own fashion. He was sitting before his big desk which she had always ridiculed as she looked up at the posted opening in the door and smiled. In that smile Barbara missed something that had been there before. She could not have told exactly what it was. Her first impulse had been to dig herself into his arms, but that impulse was melted as he smiled at her face and Keith, accustomed to a up her face and kissed her gently. Barbara's impulse was so go draw frigidly away, but her head bating fast, she did no such thing. She leaned toward him, throwing her head back as he kissed her.

He stooped and crushed his lips to hers and she did not draw away as she usually did to a pretty excuse of strange to dress, or a petulant remark. Her arms slid up around his neck. Keith felt a deep sense of relief. For days he had had a wall, a barrier of some kind between them, now it was gone. A clock struck somewhere in the place and it was Keith who first became aware of the time. "Aren't we going to the Benhams tonight?" he asked suddenly. "Do you care, what time is it? Oh, but I don't care," he said drawing her back. "What do we care for time? That night Keith came in to watch the final touch to the new dress. It had been an almost uninteresting time, he knew that for her the dress had been begun just because she knew a few moves in the game did not give her an easy victory.

Tomorrow—Barbara makes another move.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

THE GYPSY RACE BY DADDY

CHAPTER IV At the Fair

THE gipsies were much excited over the races to be held at the town fair," said Toddie Pupkins, while Peggy and Billy listened with both ears to hear about the working of Gray Prince's plan to rescue little Phil, the kidnapped boy.

Worth Noting

Vacation days are here, and more are coming. And in these times, when even short trips are costly, it is wise to clip the corners on the needed accessories.

Wanamaker's Down Stairs Store was established for that very purpose. In presenting dependable merchandise of the less expensive grades it is of real help to every vacationist. Suppose, for instance, that your vacation list includes these things:

A bathing suit Soap and talcum A pair of new pumps

A suit case A tub skirt or frock

An extra knock-about frock for one of the children. Such a list can be checked off in the Down Stairs Store at the expenditure of the minimum amount of time and money.

The Bathing Suit can be chosen from a score of women's models between $1.65 and $6.75. (Market)

The Soap and Talcum are but the affair of a moment. A generous cake of soap of a good brand can be had in rose, violet, white lilac, sandalwood or heliotrope at 10c. A pound package of talcum, trailing arbutus, corylopsis or violet is 20c. (Chestnut)

The Pumps—or perhaps it's oxford's that you want—can surely be found in the collection of women's smart Summer footwear reduced to $4.25. Most every pair was originally almost twice as much. (Chestnut)

The Suit Case can be of shiny black enameled cloth at $5 for a week-end size to $16.50 for one big enough for the whole trip. Matting cases, which are very light, are $3.75 to $12. (Chestnut)

The Tub Skirt can be of pique at $1.65 or of fine, mercerized white gabardine at $5.75—or any of the half hundred styles between. (Market)

The Frock The only hard part about choosing a frock is making up your mind which is the prettiest—there are so many delightful dresses gathered here. Prices are astonishingly low. (Market)

And for the Children there is a practical little regulation dress of Copenhagen or rose linen, trimmed with white braid. Sizes 6 to 14 years, $2.50. (Market)

Blue or pink checked gingham rompers with overall tops are cool and serviceable for youngsters of 3 to 6. 90c. (Central)

Any One of These Men's All-Wool Suits Is a Good Buy at $25, $27.50 or $34.50

—whether it's as an investment or because you need one right away. Those sound more like wholesale prices, and the sound isn't far wrong! The genuine saving on each suit is considerable.

All of them are of good-looking mixed or striped chevots, half-lined or quarter-lined with good mohair. They fit well across the back and over the shoulders and the styles are right—conservative and semi-conservative.

Separate Trousers at $3.75 White Duck or Khaki Color They stand for sports, recreation and genuine relaxation! (Gallery, Market)

Cool Cloth Suits at $14.75 These are mostly the styles that young men like, and the suits are in the lighter shades that make for coolness.

Men's Initialed Handkerchiefs, 45c Each Of pure white linen with narrow hemstitched hems and neat initials.

Men's Tan Brogue Oxfords $8.75 a Pair Need a new pair of low shoes for vacation? This is a good style with full wing tips and low, broad heels.

Plain White Linen Handkerchiefs are 30c, 45c, 50c, 75c and for extra sizes, 85c each. (Central)

Men's and Boys' Tennis Shoes and Oxfords Of white canvas, they have sturdy cemented rubber soles. $2 to $3.75 a pair. (Gallery, Market)

Men's Straw Hats $2, $2.50 and $3.50 —and there's wide choosing at these three prices. No need for any man to wear a soiled hat! (Gallery, Market)

Hundreds of Women's Vacation Dresses

All the Choosing One Could Wish Between $3 and $25
