Blackberries Are Plentiful and Should Be Used for Preserving as Much as Possible

By MRS. M. A. WILSON rights reserved.)

ATE July brings a plentiful supply of blackberries, huckleberries and mountain berries, besides watermelon and cantaloupe. For the woman who likes fresh fruit desserts: If when serving watermelon it is found to be lacking in taste, do not throw it away, but pickle it or preserve it.

Sweet Watermelon Preserve This preserve can be made with a ninimum amount of sugar. Place One and one-half pounds of white

Two pounds of granulated sugar. In the preserving kettle and bring to n boil. Cook slowly for ten minutes.

Now add

Three quarts of watermelon pulp

One pound of seedless raisins,

One cup of crystallized ginger, cut

One pound of shelled peanuts, chop

Cook slowly until thick like jam. lace in jars, crocks or bowls and cool. lover with paraffin. Cover the tops jars, bowls and crocks with a of cardboard which has been cut to fit and then paste down with strips of paper about one inch wide. Store in usual manner for jellies. Cantaloupe may be used in place of the watermelon, or part of each. This mixture will scorch if left, so in order to prevent waste place an asbestos mat nader the preserving kettle and six large agate marbles, such as the boys play with, in the bottom of the kettle with the mixture. Stir constantly. Once the mixture burns little can b done with it. Sometimes spicing helps, but to my mind scorched jam is spoiled am, so if you decide to make these jams do not leave them for an instant.

Try a mixture of huckleberries and blackberries; they are delicious.

Huckleberry and Blackberry Jam Wash and look over carefully Two quarts of blackberries, Two quarts of huckleberries.

Place in a preserving kettle and add Juice of one lemon, Two cups of finely sliced rhubard, Three-pound can of white corn sirup, Two pounds of granulated sugar. Stir to blend and then bring slowly to a boil and cook until mixture is thick like jam. Use the same method and precautions as for watermelon pre-

The Marriage Trifler By HAZEL DEVO BATCHELOR Coppright, 1920, by Public Ladger Co.

The marriage of Barbara Knight and Keith Grant began in the most propitious fashion, but Barbara, who had always been given to understand that life would be quite willing to give her everything she wanted, did not stop to think whether her idea of living coincided with her husbands or not. She wanted to queen it over every one, she wanted to be a leader of the younger set, while Keith wanted the deeper things of life. In this way Barbara was a marriage trifer, and she realized her own shortcomings only when she came face to face with the fact that if she could not give her husband the comradeship he wanted, some one else might be glad to do so. That some one else was Katherine Newbery, Keith's private secretary and an unusual woman.

BARBARA was sure of the fact that for her the fight was just beginning, when later in the evening, having established her safely in the midst of a gay party at the theatre, Keith dis It was not necessary for him to remain at the play, which was a gay musical comedy and through which most of the party talked and laughed, much to the displeasure of those who came to listen. But Barbara remembered Katherire Newbery's remark about the Thursday evenings. This was Thursday, and Keith no doubt had gone there as soon as he could conveniently get away. If Barbara had cared less for Keith she might have adopted her wife's privilege and accused him when he returned. But having at last made up her mind that she must be in fault she did no such thing. Keith was waiting for her when the curtain went down on the last act, and he went with the party to one of the roof shows, which they did not leave until after 2:30.

When they reached home, Barbara to listen. But Barbara remembered

"I suppose you've never heard me Keth looked surprised, but not guilty. "I suppose you've never heard me speak of Elise Bartiett? I met her at school, and today we had tea together at her anartment. It seems that she knows Miss Newbery very well." Ban bara said this so calmly and scrutinized her shining pirk nails demurely while she was speaking, as though the fact that she had had tea with one of Katherine Newbery's friends was the most natural thing in the world. Keith that she had had tea with one of Katherine Newbery's friends was the most natural thing in the world. Keith in the act of lighting a cigarette, stopped and stared at his wife.

"Strange, I never heard of Elise Bartlett," he remarked after a moment. "Po' we know her?"

"By that I suppose you mean does she move in our circle," Barbara asked inquiringly.

Barbara laughed, and watched Keith finally light his cigarette and blow the smoke out in fragrant whirls. "Strange, I never liked to smoke," she said irrelreactly.

There was a silence, and then Keith spoke. "Who is Elise Bartlett?"

Barbara laughed inwardly. He; was interested!
"Oh Elise! We were speaking of her, weren't we? Why, she isn't any or, weren't we? why, she isn't any ne in particular, judged by society andards. The Woman's

Are Half-Hose Proper?

o the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—I am a girl past ni teen, considered good looking, and am feet 5 inches tall. I weigh 123 pounds Could you tell me a becoming way to wear my hair? Is there any harm in a girl of my age wearing half-hose? (Although they cannot be seen.) What will make the hair long and thick? I read your column every night. You helped me before, and I thought you may be able to help me now.

may be able to help me now.

DIMPLES.

No doubt I could suggest a becoming way for you to do your hair, if I knew what you look like, but when I just know your height and weight, I cannot tell whether you are stout or thin, or whether your face is long or short, round or angular! If you are stout or have a round face, you ought not to wear your hair puffed out over your ears. If you have a long or thin face you ought not to wear it flat on the sides or in the middle, whichever is more becoming, and waved softly back to a loose, but neat, knot at the back of your head. You are the only one who can judge what is becoming, although somebody who knows you could suggest a way of arranging your hair better than some one who has never seen you.

There is no actual harm in a girl of your age wearing a party dress on the streethout it is on the same order as that. I know that girls of your age do wear them, but it doesn't seem like a very nice, ladylike thing to do. Do you think so? There is always a chance of their being seen, you know, when you step on to a trolley car, and things like that do cause talk and attract attention. Are you sure you can't keep cool unless you wear, them?
