

DEMOCRATIC DEAL
MAY OUST PALMER

Bruce Sterling Is Urged as Leader of Old Guard in Pennsylvania

DELEGATES START THINGS

Delegates to the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco who have returned to the city bring back a story of a new deal in the leadership of Pennsylvania Democrats. According to this deal the Palmer-McCallister leadership is to be pushed into the background, while State Chairman Bruce F. Sterling will be the head and front of the "reorganized" organization.

Under the terms of the arrangement, the Old Guard leaders in the various counties of the state, where they have the local majority, are to be recognized by Sterling. Among these Old Guard leaders are: Michael Liebel, of Erie; Major men are: St. Mary's; Judge Charles Copeland, of Westmoreland; James P. Greene, of Cambria; Thomas H. Greasy, of Altoona, and A. J. Casey, of Scranton.

The inclusion of these Old Guard leaders in the state organization follows the plan adopted by Attorney General Palmer in Philadelphia, where Charles P. Donnelly, long affiliated with the Old Guard element, has been recognized.

ROBBED NEAR CEMETERY

Armed bandits escape through graveyard with victim's money. Two armed bandits held up and robbed William Slimm, eighty-year-old, 2500 Diamond street, at the entrance of the Old Fellows' Cemetery, Twenty-third street near Diamond, early today. Slimm was returning from the Third Regiment Armory, Broad and Wharton streets. He left the trolley car at Sixteenth and Norris streets and walked west on Norris to Twenty-third street. There he turned south, walking along the wall of the cemetery on the west side of the street. As he reached the entrance some one standing there called him by name.

"Hey, Bill! Wait a minute," a man called. Slimm turned and found himself surrounded by two revolvers held by the bandits. The men stood in the shadow of the arched entrance and commanded him to enter.

They took $7 and threatened to take his clothes. Then they told him to face south, threatening to shoot if he moved for three minutes. The bandits escaped through the cemetery. Slimm went home after waiting the prescribed time and notified the police of the Twenty-third and Berks streets station. District Detectives Franklin and Thum are investigating. The robbery occurred shortly after 12 o'clock.

TRAIN IS DERAILED TO AVOID COLLISION

Three Are Slightly Hurt as Electric Is Overtaken in South Camden

WAS ABOUT TO HIT EXPRESS

Three men were injured slightly when a West Jersey and Seashore Railroad electric train was derailed to avoid collision with a Reading seashore express late yesterday. The smash-up occurred at the Balsa street crossing in South Camden. The electric train was derailed by a patent derailing switch, jumping the track just in time to avoid striking the steam train, riders on which sped on to the shore oblivious to their close call. The injured men are Edward C. Huhn, Red Bank avenue, Woodbury, N. J.; John W. Murphy, employed at Sixth and Market streets, and Louis Martin, Westville, N. J. All three men were in the first car of the electric train. Two of the cars overturned and a third left the rails. The fourth car of the electric train was well filled with passengers. They were thrown out of their seats, but unhurt. Not even a window was broken in this car. Railroad officials started an immediate investigation to fix the blame for the accident. The electric line is equipped with an automatic derailing switch 200 feet from the Reading crossing, which is made at right angles. It was said by railroad men that the only time this switch is open is when the signals are set against the electric train. In other words, the switch and the signals operate together, so that the open switch would indicate that the motorman ran past a stop signal. The first three cars of the electric train were to be used to carry shipworkers to South Jersey towns. The train was a Glassboro local.

He tore up the Blue Prints

THE chief engineer of a $5,000,000 plant in one of St. Louis' new industrial districts prepared plans and specifications for an $800,000 generating station to supply electric current. He figured that an immense quantity of refuse which could be used as fuel in the generating station would be provided in the daily operation of the plant.

Inquiry developed that St. Louis has a dual supply of cheap hydro-electric current and steam-generated energy in plentiful quantity to serve all industries that locate in St. Louis. The company found that St. Louis is girdled with an interlocking transmission system between the two sources of supply, giving interconnection through eight substations strategically placed throughout the city.

The company was convinced. The engineer tore up his blue prints. The plan to build an $800,000 generating station was abandoned. The company found that it could dispose of its fuel refuse in other ways and buy its power current here in St. Louis cheaper than it could generate its own supply through the use of the refuse.

St. Louis Has Abundant Electric Power

One of the essential factors in industrial development these days is an ample supply of reliable electric energy sold at rates which enable manufacturers to use it in large blocks economically. St. Louis is in a remarkably advantageous position in this respect. It has a large capacity of electric current from the Keokuk Dam and a local steam generating plant located directly on the Mississippi River.

St. Louis has not permitted its electric supply to become depleted by war conditions. During the war the management of the light and power utility foresaw a big permanent industrial development in St. Louis and kept ahead of the demand for current. Among the industries now being furnished with electric energy from St. Louis' plentiful supply are shoe, ice, automobile, drug, iron and its allied industries, drying ovens, brass and enameling ovens, electric steel and gray iron furnaces, mills and factories in almost every line of industry.

St. Louis can furnish ample electric power for any of the following sixteen industries for which there is need and a profitable market in the St. Louis trade territory:

- Malleable iron castings Cotton spinning and textile mills Blast furnaces
Screw machine products Steel and copper wire Cork products
Farm implements Machine tools and tool machinery Small hardware
Rubber products Automobile accessories and parts Dye stuffs
Locomotive works Tanneries and leather goods Drop forge plants
Shoe laces and findings

You may buy summer weight fabric suits in some stores at almost any price, but it's inadvisable to get anything but the best tailored garments in summer-weight fabrics. As Palm Beach clothes are unlined it is necessary that the tailoring in them should be of high grade because the shaping and shape-retaining features of the garments are wholly dependent on the tailoring—there is no lining to help them.
