It's hard to recognize people when they are going past in a car, but a good-looking costume has to go by pretty fast to escape little Nancy's weather eye. So this is what it was— a dark blue silk that was soft like foulard, with big, flowery designs in red all over it. It was very striking. Then she were a close fitting little dark blue hat—and she wore it with just the chic air that is so characteristic of Pauline. MRS. CHARLIE CHAPLIN

CHARLIE CHAPLIN SUED FOR DIVORCE

Cruelty Alleged by Mildred Harris, Who Says Husband Is "Naturally Erratic"

Los Angeles, Aug. 3.-Mildred Harris Chaplin, famous moving-picture beauty, filed suit for divorce from Charlie Chaplin yesterday on grounds of cruelty.

Mrs. Chaplin refused to discuss the suit, but said of her husband: "He worries and frets all the time. He worries about his income tax, about his bills, his contracts, about everything. Besides that, he's an artist, a real one, and you know all artists have temperament. I'm temperamental myself. But he's just naturally erratic."

Rumors of a rift in the matrimonial happiness of the screen stars were spread shortly after the death of their baby. Charles Spencer Chaplin, Jr. When the child was born, the king of film comedians lost a bet of $10,000 to his wife when it was learned the heir was a boy.

Despite the fact that a "mob" in costume and stage paint was waiting and drawing salaries at the Chaplin studio when news arrived of the baby's appearance, Chaplin left everything to Shortly after this comedian had been busily engaged in having a nursery arranged for Charlie. Jr., and was jubilant over what he

"dreams of the day when I termed his can teach him some new steps."
When the doctor's prediction concerning the babe's life proved true.
Chaplin seemed stunned. After riding beside the little white coffin and ing his child laid at rest, he could only say, "I've locked the door on my dreams."

Those at the studio questioned.
"What next?" It was soon answered "What next?" It was soon answered by Mrs. Chaplin herself, when she intimated all was not as she wished in the Chaplin home. Whispers began to go the usual rounds, then insinuations, then abrupt statements.

The action for divorce is the culmination of a secret marriage of the two stars a little less than two years ago. The bride was seventeen years old and Chaplin was twenty-nine. Mrs. Chaplin is a western girl, being born in Cheyenne, Wyo. She is rated an exceptional swimmer and dancer,

MANY GOOD FILMS FOR SUMMER VIEWING

Katherine MacDonald, Alice Brady and Hobart Bosworth Among Week's Stars

Stanley—"The Turning Point" in the career of Katherine MacDonald seems to have been reached for she has found a secure niche in the popularity of the patrons of this house. Her rise from supporting roles to stardom has been remarkable and warranted in every way. Particular attention seems to have been paid to appropriate stories for her. In this instance the producers have gone to Robert W. Chambers for their material.

to Robert W. Chambers for their material.

Stories of social life do not as a rule interest a majority of movie fans, but here is one that seems to catch the fancy for it was well received. A girl is placed in a position where she must use her wits to keen up with the section of society in which she has been accustomed to move. In one instance she is compelled to accept the position of, a hired hostess and so in time she meets with many persons prominent in the social register of her town. There comes the time when the swains seek out the girl. In a moment of tense anxiety, she accepts the gift of one admirer. From then on the story is kept moving at a lively rate and the denouement comes agreeably and convincingly.

Beautiful to look upon, Miss MacDonald carries the leading role with good effect, while in Nigel Barrie she has an admirable co-worker. William V. Mong is excellent, while Kenneth Harlan and Leota Lorraine are good.

Palace—"Homer Comes Home" and supplies all of the Charles Ray admirers with a comedy in back of which is an inspirational theme for many who witnessed the play. Charles Ray can impersonate a country youth with all the ungainly traits, yet with a freshness that belongs to the natural school of rating. -"Homer Comes Arcadia—"The World and His Wife" will find this one of the best entertainments of the summer season. It is full will find this one of the best entertain-ments of the summer season. It is full of good, solid material of a dramatic nature and the pictorial quality of the settings is a tribute to the artistic de-signing of Joseph Urban.

Charles Frederick Nirdlinger, relative of the local family of theatrical folk of that name, adapted the stage play from the Spanish, and in carrying it to the silversheet, Frances Marion supto the silversheet, Frances marion sup-plied the scenario while its direction was by Robert G. Vignola. Throughout the story there is a current of deep pity. The tragedy of the love of an older man for a younger wife is stressed by reason of the fact that there is a young man in the household who has been befriendd by the husband.

Its big idea is paternal love. No finer depiction of the love of a father for a son has been disclosed on the silver-sheet than that of Hobart Bosworth in this play. As an Ince "special" it deserves the attention of discriminating photopay patrons. Irvin V. Willat brings out in the direction all the important that belongs to the natural school of acting.

This is an Ince picture and the standard is maintained to the end. If the comedy in this play does not appeal to the better class pairons of the cinema, then producers had best return to the pie method of fun-making.

A small town youth has an idea. In fact, his ideas are usually ahead of the place and the people to whom they are presented. One of them was the simple method of washing a store window and decorating it, but an accident spoiled his chances and many eggs were lost thereby. Another was the non-skid contrivance to be attached to an auto in stormy weather. The failure of this forces him to leave town and take a place in the city.

When Homes comes home on a visit, of Luther Reed's story.

Father and son are divers. This has been their family trade for generations back and they are considered the best in their line. A schemer realizes the wonderful advertising power of the use of the father's name in connection with an "easy" money stunt of attempting to secure treasures at the bottom of the sea. When he fails to convince the old diver that the scheme is a good one, the villain tries to work the son. He enlists the aid of a female confidence expert. This woman's wiles soon ensure the son into trying for gold at trivance to be at the stormy weather. The failure of this stormy weather. The failure of this forces him to leave town and take a place in the city.

When Homer comes home on a visit, it is the signal for a general celebration, for his townsmen believe him to be a man of importance. The sum total of a man of importance. The sum total of his finances is but a few hundred dollars and when this is gone the youth returns to his city job, but with him he takes money subscribed by his townsmen to start a new factory. Beneath the humor is an underlying current of love and the inspiration is plain to others that they can succeed if they keep at it. Priscan succeed it they keep at it. Priscan succeed it succeed it father comes to his rescue. In the cast are Lloyd Hughes as the son and Grace Darmond as the woman. George Webb plays the villain and the supporting company is well chosen.

Regent—"Sinners" is an Alice Brady production and those who like her work may find this production interesting although it is not quite up to her usual standard. Owen Davis has written a good play and it was well received in its spoken version, but something seems amiss in its present form.

Kenneth Webb directed the piece and he has missed some points in the story which could have been improved upon if handled in a different way. The story is about a girl who leaves her friends and "well-wishers" in the country and goes into the city to secure work. When Mrs. Chaplin is a western girl, being born in Cheyenne, Wyo. She is rated an exceptional swimmer and dancer, but declares she enjoys music most of all.

ARRESTED IN "MOVIE"

Patrons of a motion-picture theatre at Twenty-ninth street and Susquehanna avenue last night saw a little "thriller"

ed by the husband.

Gosslp has wrecked many homes and caused untold suffering in the world and she approaches the goody-goody set of people for aid, it is not forthcoming. Then she meets the people from her home town who are designated as sinners in their respective ways of living. From them she gets ald and when her lesson to those inclined to gossip. However, 'as entertainment, there is plenty to enjoy of serious variety without recourse to the usual attempt at comedy relief.

TIN-PAN ALLEY HAS

They Get Entire Nation A-Humming

James Burke and Eleanor Durkin James Burke and Eleanor Durkin present a nice entertainment labeled "Tete-a-Tete in Song." Rose Clare has a clever act called "Looking Ahead." in which a glimpse into the school life of children of 1950 is given. The program also features Frank Hartley, a youthful juggler; Ed Janis and company, with a new and novel dance act; Charlie Wilson, a "nut" comedian; Paul McCarty and Elsie Fay, in a playlet with songs, "Waiting for Some One," and the Billy La Mont trio, dancers.

"RAMONA" IS ARTISTIC

INNING AT KEITH'S Filming of Indian Novel Has Ales

Chestnut-"Ramona" is one of most satisfying photoplays presen Song Writers Show Just How since Professor Muybridge showed his crude original movies of a horse in motion. This picture has all the element with which the modern movie has become associated, and it has the appeal of the artistic in its every oblong frame of celluioid.

Ten popular song writers singing their own compositions head a cleverly concepted summer show at Keith's this week.

The tin-pan alley specialists call their act "A Trip to Hitland," and it is all that, and then some, the writers filling an extremely entertaining half hour.

Syncopation and other forms of popular music were represented by Nat Vincent, Billy Baskette, Billy Frisch, Bobby Jones, Bernie Grossman and others. All are equally good.

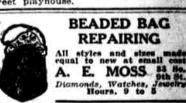

Moss and Frye, blackface comedians whose humor has a "punch," deserve all the applause they get, and they get plenty. Their act is fast, funny and clever.

James Burke and Eleanor Dunkle. now it is shown in "Ramona" that this same piece of business was used by that very actor when he was a director of this picture where a character visualizes great fear in a close-up.

Few movies have been so rich in the pictorial quality disclosed in this wonderful screen portrayal of the soulful, solemn and beautiful story by Helen Hunt Jackson. In it is something which gring the spectators as they witness runt Jackson. In it is something which grips the spectators as they witness the heroic sacrifices and noble services, of the characters and see produced that lives of the pioneers of the West. This period begins about 1845 and ends about 1881.

Names of players appearing in the Names of players appearing in that cast are not known today and yet many of them could act rings around some so-called stars of 1920. Ada Glesson is Ramona in the 1879 period, while Mabel Van Buren is the earlier Ramona. Monroe Salisbury is Alessandro and N. de Bruiller is Felipe. Lurline Lyons is Senora Moreno. There are many beautiful scenes disclosed.

Bijou Opens Saturday Night The season at the Bijou will open on Saturday evening with Bernstein's "Bathing Beauties," one of the season's novelties. This show will continue the following week. Manager Wagner is pleased with bookings for the season, many of the attractions are of higher quality than any hitherto at this house. During the summer important improvements have been made in the Eight street playhouse.

Are you aware that the gown shop of Worthington's. at 1312 Walnut street, has sold out? I am much interested, and you will be, too, to learn that L. Stone Co., at 1306 Walnut street, has bought the entire Worthington stock and are selling it at from 40% to 65% off the Worthington prices. This brings the prices of the beautiful garments very low, indeed, and women who know clothes are quickly taking advantage of the opportunity to buy garments for the present, for the fall, and even next summer. There are dresses of all kinds and descriptions, including organdies, voiles, meteors, taffetas, tricotines, Georgettes, etc., besides stunning wraps for present wear and the cooler days. Naturally, considering what a wonderful bargain each garment is. the sale of it must be final, and it cannot be charged.

I am anxious to tell you of a really remarkable sale that is going on in one of Philadelphia's most interesting interior-decorating studio shops. There you will find artistic furniture for every room in the house, including some of that celebrated year-round French willow, for which this particular studio, Kayser & Allman, at 1522 Chestnut street, is famous. Their hand-painted lamp shades, created by their own artists, are objects of art. Besides, there are mirrors, pictures, porcelains, book blocks and innumerable lovely things which go to make beautiful the home of the cultured. The shop is known as one of reasonable prices for objects of unquestionable quality and taste, but even from these is now taken, in a great clearance sale, a whole 25%! I could hardly wait to tell you after I'd wandered into the shop and saw how really lovely the merchandise is. You simply must take advantage of the sale!

Constantly am I in ecstacies over the millinery creations of Chertak-Wenger, at 1229 Walnut street, but never has her salon fascinated me more than just now, There are ravishing models for present wear and simply adorable hats for early fall. The duvetynes for 1920 express artistry and grace reminiscent of the Middle Ages, that period of supreme beauty in dress. Chertak-Wenger is already showing the best of the new models. For example, one close little hat of bark-brown duvetyn is wreathed with large and delightfully realistic leaves of its own material. When you stop to see Chertak's lovely display be sure to take the elevator to the second floor, where are to be found those House of Wenger fur garments and fur pieces fit for a queen-all at lesser pre-Fall prices.
