There have been the usual good times down at Cape May this year, but somehow you don't seem to hear so much how you don't seem to hear so much how you don't seem to hear so much how you don't seem to hear so much good tennis going on now, for Helen good tennis going on now, for Helen good tennis going on now, for Helen good tennis going on Mrs. Harvey, and seemel is there and Mrs. Harvey, and seemel is play so well. And then, of about them as usual. There's very good tennis going on now, for Helen good tennis going on now, for Helen Sewell is there and Mrs. Harvey, and they both play so well. And then, of course, there are the usual beach course. The Harrison K. Caners, Jr., gave one last week, and so did Mr., gave one last week, and so did Mr. and Mrs. John H. Brownback, Jr. She and Mrs. John H. Brownback, Jr. She little Elizabeth Kennedy, you little Elizabeth Kennedy, you was little Elizabeth Kennedy, you know.

Lysbeth Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Boyd, and Eleanor Dunning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Dunning, are staying with Mrs. Frank Dougherty at the Chalfonte for some time. And by the way, I hear that Mrs. Tom Peyton—Phoebe Satterfield that was, you know—is going over to Coblens soon with her small daughter to join Tom. He is a captain now.

The Tommy Harts have been down there for a while, and Mr. and Mrs. Hollinshead Taylor, of St. Martins, were there over the week-end. Mr. and Mrs. William Morice, of Chestnut Hill, are also going down soon. Alice Morice is almost at the debutante age, or at least almost the subdeb age. She is a very attractive looking girl with her very light hair and clear complexion.

TT'S remarkable how many people are still at home. Of course, it's been so cool that you really don't have to go so col that, except to get out of town for a while-but people didn't know it was going to be like this when they made going to be like this when they made their plans for the summer, and yet you run into people you know all the time. I saw Sidney Franklin—Mrs. Francis H. Bohlen. Jr.—the other day on H. Bohlen. Jr.—the other day on Walnut street. She was looking very well in a blue dress with the popular accordion pleated skirt—they are so good-looking—and a lighter blue hat that was awfully pretty on her light bair. She has such lovely golden hair and blue eyes, that any shade of blue is always becoming to her.

Then I saw Helena Robinson and Cheslette Cheston strelling about to Charlotte Cheston strolling about together at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, both in white waists and skirts. Isn't it funny what a difference there can be in those few little words? You say in these few little words? You say white waist and skirt, and let it go at that. On some people that might mean something perfectly hopeless. When you're talking about those two girls you mean a perfectly plain waist and just as plain a skirt, but it looks as well as the most alborate ball govern. well as the most elaborate ball gown. I think it would be appropriate right here if I should slip in the good old standby, "It isn't so much what you wear as the way you wear it." That always

THEY were in the army together. and, although they weren't quite uddies," they were pretty good friends overseas. They went on sev-eral passes together and that's enough to make anybody good friends. But when the war ended one of them, whom you know and I know, came back here where he belongs and the other went back West where he belongs. And they didn't see each other or hear from each other for months. Finally the one who belongs here had a letter from other saying he was in town living at a boarding house somewhere or other and working hard. So the O. W. B. H. went to see him.

He found the house all right and was directed to the proper room. He opened the door and walked in "informal like" and discovered a limp, unconscious form lying on the bed. Did he hesitate and walk lightly in order not to disturb the sleeper? He did not! With a wild, uncouth howl he rushed upon him, turned him gleefully over, and looked into the startled eyes of a perfect stranger. yes of a perfect stranger. He had forgotten that hard-working
