For Young Men and Young Women

ZACHARIAH FOX, OF LIVERPOOL

Many years ago he was the principal merchant of Liverpool, the chief port of Great Britain, and of the world in Fox's time. He was asked how he contrived to realize the large fortune he possessed: His reply was, "Friend, by one article alone, in which thou mayest also prosper if thou pleasest,

'Civility'

What does civility comprehend? Worcester says, "the quality of being civil; urbanity, refinement, courtesy, politeness, attention, complaisance."

All people coming in contact with others, take notice:

NOBODY who brings his or her reason to bear upon the question can fail to realize that in the making of furniture and also of furniture sales there are generally two actuating ideas. One of these might be called the idea of safety and the other the idea of present profit.

Now it stands to reason that in order to make furniture or a furniture sale safe enough for a business firm's reputation and safe enough for the people to depend upon, the first essential is good quality. On the other hand, if present profit is the chief motive, the shortest road to it is to cut the quality either as regards materials or process of making.

Putting In or Leaving Out

Thus there are two ways of making furniture and furniture sales.

One is the plus way, the other is the minus way. One way calls for putting in, the other for leaving out.

Our own belief and experience tell us that the idea of safety is the only one any man or any store worthy to be in business can adopt—safety for the customer, safety for the store, safety for all concerned with the merchandise involved.

Safety, as we have shown, implies quality, because apart from quality there is no safety, and where there is no safety there is neither satisfaction nor economy.

The basic thing about the Wanamaker Furniture Sale is that it is such a safe sale to buy in.

It is safe because the furniture it brings is made on the principle of plus treatment, the principle of putting in, not the minus one of leaving out.

Whether our prices LOOK lower than any others is a thing we never bother to think about, because we KNOW that for the same dependable, beautiful qualities of goods they could not be lower with safety to the customer or to ourselves.

So you see that after all the building up of the largest sale in the world is a matter of clear common sense, backed by a sense of common fairness and a resolute fidelity to the principle of safety and dependability, come what may.

All our furniture and all our resources are back of this August Sale, and savings range from 10 to 50 per cent.

A Traveling Bag That Will "Wear Like Iron"

That's a hackneyed phrase, never intended to be taken quite literally, but if there is anything that will wear like iron it is a good, stout piece of leather.

These bags are made of very heavy tan cowhide—solid cowhide. It is the kind of leather Uncle Sam uses in Army trappings.

The bags have sewed-in frames and heavy corners. They are a roomy oxford shape, with plaid fabric lining, and are to be had in Philadelphia at Wanamaker's only.

There are still three months of low-shoe weather left for everybody, and many people nowadays wear low shoes all year 'round.

As for the high shoes, these are all in advanced Fall styles and all priced much less than the same styles will be later.

Altogether it is an opportunity no one can afford to miss. There are not all sizes in every style, but every one can be sure of finding something desirable in his or her size.
