This is one of the brightest Selznick to impersonate an English earl after a scrape. A salesman is placed in the home of a man who has made his family a lot of trouble, but the folks are not quite wise enough to discover that the "double" is not the real head of the fouse. Because of the escapades of the original, his wife has left him, but when the newcomer meets the wife there are many complications before it is shown that all is well and the wife is told of the substitution. Of course, the death of the earl leaves the way rightly clear for the wedding. wedding. Faversham is a comedian of Arcadia—"The Sins of St. Anthony" is the best picture in which Bryant Washburn has appeared for a long time, In fact, it is so different from the films he has made in the past that it is worsty of attention, James Cruze di-rected, while Charles Collins supplied the story .

A scientist is engaged to a woman who later transfers her affections to a soldier who has more 'pep' than her ruitor. It appears that the lady in question has been corresponding with a soldier whom she has never met, but one day a hero turns up and, of course, he is entertained in fine style. In despair the engaged scientist seeks the aid of an actress, who is to put him in the way of being a "live one." Besides Bryant Washburn there is Margaret Loomis, a former dancer, whose picture work is fine, while in Lorenza Lazzarini is found a new type

There is some depth to this picture, which was written by John Booth Harrower and directed by King Vidor. It shows in a way that right thinking often has a lot to do with our actions. Here is a girl who a lawys thought things right in a sort of "Polyanna" style and, of course, in the end she was victorious. # WRECKED AMONG CANNIBALS

Garrick Movie Has Romance and Adventure

Adventure

Garrick—"Shipwrecked Among Canntbals" reveals some of the most remarkable scenes of aboriginal life ever caught by the camera. The collection is captioned as a Universal-Jewel production, and it bears testimony to the resourcefulness and bravery of the two camera men who are supposed to have risked their lives among the Tia Tia head hunters of New Guinea. While the skeptical spectator may be pardoned a doubt or two that the explorers were actually in such great danger as they claim, the pictures are nevertheless a truly extraordinary record or life among savagea.

The head hunters are hide and the market is a truly extraordinary record or life among savagea.

theless a truly extraordinary record or life among savages.

The head hunters are hideous in the extreme, and their idea of personar decoration, which include self-mutitation and the staining of the faces, are entirely exotic. Shots are also shown of native babies playing with skults which their ferocolous fathers have accumulated in tribal warfare. There is also a considerable display of feminine nudity, but this, because it is so entirely primitive, does not smack of the satacious. In addition to some superb long shots of ocean and jungle, the film has been very cleverly titled with a dash of humor now and then.

Pictures of a tiger hunt in Stam, in which the animal attacks the photographer, make a fitting prelude to the main showing.

Film Comedy at Metropolitan, Plus

Other Features

Other Features

Metropolitan—"Up in Mary's Attic." contrary to most places of that sort, does not contain a lot of rubbish, but a greet baby belonging to one of the girls in a seminary where her husband is the instructor. The baby is one of the real, attractive factors in this comedy, which possesses much of the human-intempts of a couple to hide from the guardian of the girl that she is married and is thus not entitled to the residue of a late relative's will. But the time comes when she is of age and all is well.

Many beautiful girls take part in the film, and their athletic ability is shown to its fullest as is their ability to wear demitasse costumes of the bathing and symnasium variety. In the swimming scenes they appear to advantage. Good effect, by the use of the slow-motion photography, marks the diving episodes.

For once there is nothing to offend in this comedy picture, and the Royal Co. is to be commended for its efforts to keep the entertainment clean, despite opportunity to do otherwise. In addition to the film is shown a delightful cartoon in which Andy Gump and his son are Evening Public Ledoga daily.

An extra attraction is the "Emanuel Bathing Girls," who appear in person and disport themselves in various ways to entertain. The rest of the excellent Jim White to draw a heavy team with-out any aid other than his human self. The show is a bright and summery extended. Other Features
