I met a farmer's wife once who assured me that these matters of styles were settled by the people who cut the paper patterns for the fashion magazines. They got together and settled it and that was the said of it.

Things You'll Love to Make

A. Ford, familiarly known as Art, was due to arrive from overseas in a couple of months and the wedding was to take of months and the wedding was to take place immediately. Knowing that it would be impossible for him to make the plans upon his arrival he had asked Stephen Chandler to anticipate his coming to Brookhurst, and attend to all necessary final arrangements. Steve was to be the best man—Steve, who had so vallantly faced death with him in the trenches, and who had now returned to twins only by the oft-told tales repeated twins only by the oft-told tales repeated to him on many starilt nights amidst the horrors of No Man's Land. Many a warning had he received not to fall in love with Charlotte, but to be as fascinating as he pleased to Virginia. The twins had always planned a on the day of Steve's arrival Chartotte had been compelled to make a last shopping expedition to the city, to be gone a few days, so it was left for Virginia to do the honors for the new guest. A naughty little impulse leaped into Jean's brain. Why not? Just for such a short time! That would certainly ward off a possible suitor. He might think it compulsory for him to fall in love at first sight with the might think it compulsory for him to fall in love at first sight with the best proof that a pure cream is good for the skin is shown by the fact that almost invariably actresses have clear complexions, in spite of all the make-up they are obliged to use. And it is commonly agreed that the reason for such clear, good skins is the thorough cleansing afforded by the necessary use of frequent applications of cold cream. Well, now, there is one cleansing cream I know of that has, I was about to say, a national reputation. And I believe I'm not far from right in making such a claim for it. Gradually Jean began to feel just a little sorry for the deception, but she did not quite knew how to crawl out of the situation, while Steve was trying to keep a tight control on his heartstrings. He berated himself as an abominable cur to be falling in love with his friend's sweetheart, but he had to acknowledge to himself that such was the case. But he allowed no hint of it to escape, although it took as much courage as he had ever displayed previously to hide his real feelings.

When they encountered Barry, just returning from a business trip. Now Jean might misled others, but never Barry; he "knew her too well!" He was nearly abreast of them when Jean, deep in thought as to how she was to straighten out matters before her sister should learn of the ruse, was surprised by a cheery; "Honk-honk! Don't steer right into a fellow, Jean!" Whereupon Jean was so upset that she forgot to give Barry a warning signal behind Steve's back. By the time she forgot to give Barry a warning signal behind Steve's back. By the time she the introduction Steve had caught just an inkling of the real truth. At first he was a bit angry, and then when the full realization of all it meant came to him he was so unaccountably happy he chuckled just as Barry exclaimed: "Aha, Jean! Pranking again! Well, let me be the first to congratulate you!" and the incorrigible ex-suitor vanished.

Jean blushed a most beautiful crimson, while Steve looked at her with an admiration he now felt no need to conceal, and then the situation was reached. By the time the station was reached. Matters had progressed so well that

Story of two as charming and lovable girls as you might chance to meet, funloving, adorable, as full of pranks as our old car is of cranks.

Barry Seymour had laughingly dubbed them the "Twin-Sixteens" four years before and the name had clung. He asserted that they were always overspeeding, but that he never liveweither of them to have any "tire trouble"—they possessed enormous energy, and were always "on the go." Then, in addition, their name was Packard, although Charlotte was about to change hers to Ford. This had once again occasioned Barry's incorrigible wit.

It Can Be Done!

Some folks imagine that quality depends on price - in other words, they take it for granted that the highest priced article in any field must be the best.

Asco Blend Coffee has proved the fallacy of this belief.

Asco Blend is a certain combination of high - grade coffees, blended and roasted by a special process which gives it that delightful aroma and satisfying flavor that have made it the most popular coffee wherever it is sold. But, in spite of its unassailable leadership in the coffee field, it is sold at a low price. For months, the price was only 40c per lb. and even this has now been reduced to 35c-a direct cut of 5c per lb.!

This big reduction is only possible because we are direct importers and because our paramount aim is to give you "the most of the best for the least." Through our close connections with the sources of supply, we are able to immediately give you the benefit of every changing condition in the food markets of the world.

Full heavy body, insuring economy-more cups per lb.

Sold only in Asco Stores, conveniently located all over Philadelphia and in the principal cities and towns of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.
